HOLLIS HOTEL SLAYER VICTIM'S 'FRIEND'

Aged Somerville Woman Killed by Auto

THOMAS R. MARSHALL, EX-VICE-PRESIDENT, DEAD

Big Air Race Planned by Evening American

Hundreds of thousands of visitors to Boston on Bunker Hill Day, June 17, will witness one of the most spectacular airplane contests ever staged in New England through the enterprise of the Boston Evening American.

This "Sealed Order" contest will be open to aviators of the Massachusetts National Guard. The Boston Evening American will offer $500 in prizes which are to include two valuable cups as well as money prizes.

The purpose of this "Sealed Order" airplane contest is to increase the interest of the citizens of New England in aviation. President Coolidge is interested in promoting the increase in aviation for purposes of national defense. His administration announced itself only Saturday as heartily behind the project.

To bring this interest in aviation home to its readers, the Boston Evening American announces it will get behind this unusually interesting flight.

2-HOUR FLIGHT.

The flight is to be of two hours' duration. It is called a "Sealed Order" flight because the aviators will receive sealed orders at their field from the East Boston Airport.

Speeding through the air, the fliers will open their sealed orders and head for the first landing place directed by the orders.

There the aviators will receive a second set of sealed orders. These will inform the aviators where they must make their second landing.

Again the contestants receive a third set of orders which will direct them to a certain point.

The aviators keeping closest to the schedule as arranged by the Flying Committee will be declared the winners and be awarded the

HEART TOO WEAK TO RESIST NEW ATTACK; WAS READING BIBLE

Washington, June 1 (A.P.)—Thomas R. Marshall, former vice-president of the United States, is dead. He passed away at the New Willard Hotel, where he had been ill for several days with a cold and a heart affection.

Death came unexpectedly, as the former Vice-President had shown some improvement the past week and plans had been made for his return to his home in Indianapolis some time this week.

On his arrival here, a week ago, Mr. Marshall went directly to the hotel, complaining of great exhaustion. When physicians were summoned, it was found he had suffered from a heart attack. He regained strength gradually, however, and soon was in such a condition that it was possible for Mrs. Marshall to leave the bedside to attend to various personal errands around the capital.

When the end came, he was sitting up in bed reading from the Bible, to which he had turned throughout life for consolation and guidance, and into whose passages he often delved in his office adjoining the Senate chamber in moments

3 KIDNAPERS CONFESS PICKFORD-NEGRI PLOT

Los Angeles, June 1 (U.N.S.)—Complete confessions that they planned to kidnap Mary Pickford, Pola Negri, Jackie Coogan and the grandchildren of E. L. Doheny, Los Angeles oil millionaire, were made today by Adrian A. Woods, Claude Halcomb and C. A. Stevens, according to police.

The trio arrested as suspects in the kidnaping plot, signed confessions telling how they plotted to kidnap the screen stars while disguised as Shriners.

Halcomb, it was claimed, has a police record and was said by police to have declared he would shoot Miss Pickford if she resisted capture when they executed their alleged plot.

Police said they believed the trio

SLAIN IN HOTEL ROOM BY STRANGE ENEMY

Mrs. Mary Price, theatrical wardrobe mistress, who was beaten and choked to death in her bed. Picture of her husband, William Price, was taken today upon his arrival from New York.

BELIEVE SLAYER WAS ONCE FRIEND OF MARY PRICE

With the conviction growing stronger every moment that the murderer of Mrs. Mary Price, wardrobe mistress of "The Brown Derby," was known to the victim, the police set their dragnet today along close and theatrical lines.

The wispy reconstruction of the night crime in Room 406 of the Hollis Hotel, as visualized by the slayer-hunters, has "Mother" Price recognizing a robber or assailant in her room, crying the name out and losing her life under the brutal hands of the frightened invader, bent on silence.

"Mother" Price was either the victim of this pieced-out

RUM SPECIAL BACK IN HUB AGAIN. VERY DRY

Back home and dry!

That's the predicament of most of those who rolled in from Montreal this morning on the returning Memorial Day special.

Trusting friends of the excursionists, who depended on them to "bring back a little something," have nothing but disappointment ahead.

Any liquor brought back across the border into Volsteadland came in the stomachs of the pilgrims to the shrine of John Barleycorn.

It is doubtful if a single tourist got a single quart of Black Horse or Dow's Capsule or a single "fifth" of Scotch into the country.

Some of the excursionists stayed over. Some meant to stay over, when they started. Then again, some were lost or mislaid by their

ICE TRAP MAY HAVE CLAIMED AMUNDSEN

London, May 1 (U.N.S.)—That Captain Roald Amundsen and his associate flyer, Lieut. Lincoln Ellsworth, may have been deceived by the smooth appearance of ice at the North Pole and have landed their aeroplanes in a pit or crevice, was the theory advanced here today by aviators and explorers to explain the silence of the expedition that left Spitsbergen 11 days ago for presumably an 18-hour trip to the pole.

Although offers of aid have been made to the Norwegian government by the United States, France, Italy, and individuals, there is as yet no definite move for a relief expedition. Apparently it is the belief of experts that it is too early to think the party needs relief.

The opinion is growing on the theory that he was unable to land his planes in such shape that they are available for the return trip.

BODY OF ROXBURY NURSE RECOVERED

Annapolis, Md., June 1 (A.P.)—The bodies of Lieutenant Gerald Selby, U. S. N. Medical Corps, and Miss Lucille Merrill, a nurse, who were drowned while canoeing last Tuesday night, were recovered today. They came to the surface near a bridge over Severn River a few miles from Annapolis, and not far from the spot where a woman's screams were heard Tuesday night. Lieutenant Selby and Miss Merrill were attached to the Naval Hospital here.

Miss Merrill was the daughter of Dr. W. T. Merrill of the Veterans' Bureau Hospital at Roxbury, Mass. Lieutenant Selby was from Atlanta, Ga. He leaves a wife.

George T. Bell, fifty-three years old, and single, of No. 66 Causeway street, was found unconscious in the Charles River at the end of Bay State road today. CONDITION OF WEEKS 'NOT SO GOOD' TODAY

Although the condition of Secretary of War John W. Weeks, who was operated upon for the removal of gallstones at Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital, was reported as being not so good today, his son, Sinclair Weeks, denied his father's condition is considered critical and that any concern is felt over his recovery.

"Of course, my father is uncomfortable after his operation, but that is to be expected," said Mr. Weeks. "He is a very sick man, but is a little better today and we look for a more decided improvement within the next 24 hours."

The bulletin issued by Dr. D. F. Jones and Dr. F. G. Brigham is as follows:

"Secretary Weeks' condition not so good this morning. He had a restless night. Pulse 90; temperature normal."

It was reported at Phillips House that Mr. Weeks has recovered from the attack of hiccoughs from which he was suffering.

FRESHMEN AT YALE FACING PUNISHMENT

New Haven, Ct., June 1 (A.P.)—Yale officials today were investigating a riotous celebration staged by the freshman class in the Berkeley Oval, the freshman dormitory section yesterday and last night, in which the old traditional freshman fence was torn down for kindling wood. Professor F. H. Bangs was handled roughly in trying to quell the outbreak and much damage was done.

Today the entire freshman class faces the punishment of being placed on probation for its riotous action, evidently started to celebrate the closing of the college year. Such a probationary measure, if adopted, will mean the recall of the freshman crew, now in practice at Gales Ferry for the Harvard regatta this month

OLD "FRIEND" OF SLAIN WOMAN SOUGHT IN HOLLIS MYSTERY

MRS. PRICE FEARED TO STAY IN HOTEL, BELL BOY TELLS AMERICAN

drama or she was battered into unconsciousness and then asphyxiated with a pillow by some person or persons nursing a grudge. Down to these theories the police have narrowed their hunt.

OFFERS $500 REWARD.

William Price, stage carpenter at the Shubert-Vanda Theatre, New York, and husband of the murdered woman, arrived in Boston today and almost collapsed when he viewed his wife's body.

When he had partially recovered his composure at police headquarters, h offered a reward of $500 for information leading to the arrest of the slayer.

The woman companion who was with Mrs. Price following the final performance of "The Brown Derby" Saturday night, and for whom the police have been searching, visited the Lagrange street station today and identified herself as Mrs. Mary Hughes, who moved today from No. 26 Carson street to No. 99 Beaumont road, Dorchester.

VISITED MRS. PRICE.

With her daughter, Helen Hughes, the Dorchester woman was employed as a chorus dresser during the week's run of the "Derby" at the Wilbur Theatre. They struck up a close acquaintance with the wardrobe mistress.

Mrs. Hughes revealed today that only a fortunate chance allowed her to escape a fate maybe similar to that of Mrs. Price on Saturday night.

After the women had lunched together in a restaurant adjoining the Wilbur Theatre, "Mother" Price invited Mrs. Hughes to stay over night with her at the Hollis.

Mrs. Hughes declined, because she was preparing to move her home, and remaining in town would mean the loss of the first part of Sunday.

Police are satisfied that Mrs. Hughes or her daughter is the woman seen Saturday night with "Mother" Price before and after the final performance of the show.

KNEW SHE KEPT MONEY.

A Boston police inspector was sent hurriedly to New York today to question members of "The Brown Derby" company, both those that were examined here and others who left Boston in automobiles directly after the Saturday night show to go over the road to New York.

It is the belief t the police that the murderer may be a person well known to members of show companies now making Boston—a person who knew that "Mother Price" was the money holder for careless actors and actresses.

According to troupers in other current Hub productions, Mrs. Price, for thirty-five years a watchful guardian of chorus girls and their confidante, was usually well supplied with funds and was always willing to tide her company friends over until pay day.

Many members of her company were in the habit of asking her to hold the bulk of their money for safe-keeping. As many other ward robe mistresses often are, "Mother" Price was the safe deposit vault for her friends.

ROBBERY THE MOTIVE.

She performed this service of friendship with "The Pink Lady" company fifteen years ago and before and since with many other troupes playing in Boston and it is the police belief that the murderer knew she was custodian of general funds and sought to steal the money.

The police inspector was sent to New York following a conference between District Attorney O'Brien, Inspector James Dennessey, head of the homicide bureau, and Medical Examiner Leary.

Strong indications that at least one man and one woman were responsible for the brutal beating administered to the wardrobe mistress before she was strangled to death are seen by the investigators.

All the police would indicate, however, was that "something is due to happen today."

From Room Clerk Dunne at the Hotel Commodore, a short distance away from the Hotel Hollis, it was learned that Mrs. Price intended moving to the Commodore Sunday afternoon, had the show held over in Boston for its full-planned run.

On last Tuesday or Wednesday, according to Dunne, Mrs. Price called at the Commodore and said she wished to change her hotel, because she was lonely at the Hollis. Theatrical friends, she said, had told her the Commodore people were more than ordinarily friendly.

She reserved a room and said she would take up the reservation yesterday afternoon if "The Brown Derby" held over.

The murdered woman's husband was in a pitiful condition when he reached Boston after a sleepless night from New York, where police kept him on the verge of collapse for five hours.

HUSBAND IS MYSTIFIED.

During these entire five hours, Price was questioned by New York detectives as to his wife, her habits, her friends, his home life and his own friends, all of the detectives meanwhile refusing to enlighten him as to the reason for the inquisition.

His first intimation of what lay under the grilling came when he was taken from New York police headquarters to the 100th street precinct station. As he walked in with an inspector, the man on the desk greeted his companion with:

"Hello Joe! What department are you in now?"

"Homicide squad," the inspector answered, and Price had his first intimation that he and his wife were moving in an atmosphere of murder.

WAS TO HAVE MET WIFE.

Price told the Boston police that his last letter had been received from his wife on May 29—last Friday. In it she said her show was closing Saturday night for revamping before being placed in production again.

Her letter asked him to meet her at 7 p. m. Sunday at the Grand Central station. She gave no intimation in the letter that she harbored any fear of anybody or anything, he said.

Fingerprint experts today are photographing the fingerprints of the slayer, on the woman's neck and body, in the hope of obtaining some clue to the identity of the mysterious slayer.

A bell-boy at the Hollis, John Regan, has given the police their first tangible clue in the murder mystery.

This blonde Amazon and the wardrobe mistress engaged in a heated argument, when Mrs. Price engaged her room at the hotel a week ago. The fight between the women was staged in Mrs. Price's room, a short time after the "mother" of the theatrical company had indicated that she lived in fear of her life.

Mrs. Price engaged the room only after she had inspected several that were available. She refused to take a room that had a doorway leading into a main hallway, while she insisted that the windows in her room be tightly locked.

A window which led to a fire escape caused the greatest apprehension.

"Lock it tightly. I want to be safe," the wardrobe custodian told the bellboy when she was first shown to the room.

When the woman's body was discovered in the hotel room, with finger marks on the throat, and with the face and body covered with bruises such as only could have been inflicted by a powerful assailant, the fight between Mrs. Price and the unknown Amazon was recalled to the mind of young Regan.

The bellboy, who has since quit his job at the Hollis hotel, lives at No. 17 Forbes street, Jamaica Plain. He told his story to a reporter for the Boston Evening American and to the police and, as a result, at least one arrest is anticipated with in the next twenty-four hours.

Here is the story he related to Proprietor Regan and a Boston Evening American reporter:

ACTIONS SUSPICIOUS.

"I remember the woman who was assigned to Room 406 a week ago today. She came in with three other women. I supposed they were all from the same theatrical company.

"This woman—the one I now know as Mrs. Price, was the only one to register. The others left telling the clerk they'd come back later. In this group of three was a tall woman about thirty-five years of age with blonde hair and broad shoulders. She wore a blue or black suit I think.

"Mrs. Price went up in the elevator with me. The clerk gave me the keys to rooms 419 to 421 in the front of the house. Mrs. Price didn't like either of these rooms. She told me she didn't want a room near a main way. I thought that funny and so I got the key to room 406.

"When I opened the door to this room she went immediately to the two windows and looked out. One of the windows—on the south side—connects with the fire escape the other window does not.

"Mrs. Price said to me: 'Boy, I want you to lock these windows, lock them tight. She was very nervous and of course I called her attention to the fact that only one window led to the fire escape.

"She hesitated a moment and then said: 'Well be sure you lock that one'—pointing to the window leading to the iron platform of the fire escape.

"I said to her after locking this window securely: 'You needn't be afraid here lady.'

"'Well, I want to make sure that everything is all right,' she answered.

"Then I tried the doorkey to make sure it worked. I gave it to her and left the room. That was a little after 5 o'clock in the afternoon. An hour later the woman left her room. She returned soon after. The tall blonde woman had left previously with the other two, was with her.

"I had a call for the fourth or fifth floor some ten minutes after they arrived. As I went up in the elevator I heard very loud, angry talking in this woman's room. Up on the fifth floor I stopped a moment to listen to a radio. I returned to the fourth floor and stopped outside Mrs. Price's room.

HEARD ARGUMENT.

"I heard Mrs. Price and another woman fighting—that is they were shouting in anger at each other. I couldn't get the drift of the argument, but it was pretty hot and they were very angry.

"That didn't mean anything to me then, but when I heard this nervous lady had been murdered I thought of that 'battle of words' right away."

Sergeant Thomas Harvey and Special Officer Hartigan of the Lagrange street police station, who are investigating the murder interviewed young Regan this morning.

It is the belief of the authorities that the killing of Mrs. Price was an "inside job" instigated and deployed by some person in the theatrical profession and they are convinced that the tall "Amazon" who quarreled with Mrs. Price in the latter's room, may know something of the crime.

Sergeant Harvey and Medical Examiner Timothy Leary expect to question six young actresses of the "Brown Derby" company today. These were among members of the company who were given their pay envelopes by Mrs. Price Saturday night.

ANCIENTS AT GRAVE OF FIRST COMMANDER

Detail from Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company placing wreath on grave of Captain Robert Keayne, founder of historic organization, in King's Chapel Burying Ground today. Exercises in memory of Captain Keayne were a feature of the 287th anniversary of the company. The company was founded here in 1638.

THOUSANDS SEE ANCIENTS IN BIG PARADE

Thousands lined the streets today to watch the colorful parade of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts, the oldest military organization in America, celebrating its 287th anniversary.

Governor Alvin T. Fuller joined the line of march at the State House and accompanied the Ancients to the Old South Church at Dartmouth and Boylston streets, where the annual services were held.

At City Hall the parade was reviewed by Mayor Curley, Major-General Andre W. Brewster and a representative of Rear Admiral de Stigueur, commandant of the Navy Yard.

Many old timers in the ranks of the Ancients marched with firm steps in spite of the heavy trappings of the brilliant dress uniforms and the broiling sun. After the church services the company marched to the Common for a drumhead election of officers and a review by Governor Fuller.

FOUNDER IS HONORED.

At a banquet this evening at the Copley-Plaza the speakers will include Major General Brewster, Senator William M. Butler, Mayor James M. Curley and James T. Williams, Jr., editor of the Boston Evening American.

The feature of this year's celebration was the honoring of Captain Robert Keayne, founder and first commander of the company.

After decorating Captain Keayne's grave in King's Chapel Burying Ground, members of the Ancients dedicated a tablet in his memory on the new building at No. 1 State street, the site of his home and shop.

Mayor Curley accepted the tablet for the city, and Max Shunan, owner of the building, was given charge of it.

ORGANIZED IN 1638.

The tablet was presented by Colonel Henry D. Comerais, commander of the Ancients, in an appropriate speech, and remarks were also made by Captain Thomas H. Rattigan, chairman of the committee.

The tablet sets forth that Captain Keayne was born in Windsor, England, 1595, and was a member of the London Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company in 1623.

He came to Boston, where, the tablet cites, he was a worthy citizen from 1635 to 1656, among other things introducing pure water into the community and contributing to the town library. He founded the Boston Ancients in 1638.

Following the exercises, the company formed up at the armory in Faneuil Hall and marched to the New Old South Meeting House on Boylston street, where the customary services were held, after which the review and election on the Common took place.

RUM EXCURSION CROWD HOME VERY DRY

friends in the City of Light Wines and Beers.

And half a dozen were taken off the excursion train at Newport on their way back, because they didn't have documents along to prove they were Americans.

In the specious "ads" of the excursion, of course, stress was laid upon Montreal's claims to fine old houses, beautiful churches, and religious shrines.

Strange as it may seem, there were no S. R. O. signs at any of those places, while the wine rooms and beer cafes and government distributing stores did the well-known land-office business.

SEARCHERS BRING WOE.

It was a happy crowd when it boarded the train for the return. There were plenty of quarts and pints in sight, and even suitcases filled with Canadian ale.

But at West Montreal, before the boys had settled themselves for the first drink, the Federal inen went aboard, and then there was woe.

It did no good to say "Whazzis?" Nor, "This ain't the U. S. A. yet." Nor to threaten the searchers with reprisals.

For it was an excursion and every man on it (and woman, too) was presumably headed back for the great American desert.

Baggage was examined thoroughly. Berths were turned up. Even persons were searched.

"Sun outrage," shouted one freedom loving soul, seeing his last quart confiscated.

"Sun outrage," echoed scores, yes, hundreds, trying to gulp down at least some of the hidden stores before the agents got it.

SAD HOME-COMING.

But the agents went right on. The floor was strewn with empty bottles. Some of "the lads" were singing. Some were drowsing. Some were ovating. Some were fighting, although that was quickly stopped.

At Newport the special was halted for an hour while the dry agents concluded their search. There the second section of the excursion train caught up with the first.

Until nearly daybreak, as the excursion train roared back into dry America, the well-trained passengers kept up their revelry. Then, as the effect of the spirits began to wear off and they began to realize that was all there was, there wasn't any more this side of Canada, they began to drop off into troubled slumber.

When the train pulled into the North Station a sullen crowd debarked, nursing dark brown tastes and splitting headaches, and no place to go but a moonshine parlor to cure themselves.

The robbery was discovered by Donald Stuart of No. 77 Florence avenue, Revere, an employe of the dance hall, shortly after midnight today. Two doors were jimmied by the safe-men in getting at the safe, the door of which was blown into small places by the powerful charge of nitro-glycerin used. The office had been locked up earlier in the evening, and all the employes on duty were in the theatre on the street floor below.

Finger Print Expert Roscoe Hill from the State House and Inspector Harrison of the Chelsea police department made a minute examination of the premises, seeking finger prints. Officers Tighe and Hartigan, of the Revere police, summoned when the robbery was discovered, searched the neighborhood, but without success.

'SYSTEM' IS CHANGED AT SING SING

Gloom Cast by Becker's Plight Depresses Lowrie and Starts Him Drinking

Back in a felon's cell, after nearly fourteen years of freedom, a victim of his own weakness, and slowly dying of tuberculosis, Donald Lowrie describes the path of sin and shame he trod. Paroled to finish his great book, "My Life in Prison," he gained the confidence of governors and many high in civic and industrial life. But within a short time he was secretly drinking heavily and indulging in numerous intrigues with women.

CHAPTER XXXV.

IN accepting the wardenship of Sing Sing, Osborne committed himself to the job of handling the worst prison in America, barring the slave-like prison farms and mines of the South.

Aside from the wretched physical defects and inadequacies of the cell-block and obsolete shops, there was a constant influx of new prisoners, an average of twelve a day, with a consequent transfer of men by the hundreds to the other three prisons of the State.

It was like the pouring of water through a sieve, making it difficult to effect organization and permanency of understanding. In this constant transfer to the other prisons there were many cross currents and much pulling of political wires.

Seventy-five per cent. of the 5,000 convicts in New York State came first to Sing Sing, where only 1,600 could be "accommodated." The great majority came from New York and its immediate vicinity, where many of them had close interests and family ties. Naturally such men wished to remain close as possible to loved ones. To keep them all at Sing Sing was impossible, and their pleas and prayers to remain there had to be ignored.

New 'Chair' Victims Arrive Frequently

In many cases it meant the separation of men from their families for years, because most of the families were poor and could not afford to travel to Auburn or Clinton or Great Meadow for visits. All this made a very trying situation. Every prisoner transferred against his will, after having been definitely sentenced to Sing Sing by the courts, felt aggrieved and unjustly dealt with.

I began to realize very early that life at Sing Sing was going to be a continual round of harassment, fur-

L. A. COOLIDGE DEATH SHOCKS G. O. P.

June Scheible, declared the prettiest girl in Radcliffe College, chairman of the photographic committee of the class of 1926. The other members of the committee are Ruth Heeks, Concord; Elizabeth Barrett, Cambridge; Elizabeth Yens, Cambridge; Elizabeth Lindsey, Marblehead; Esther Glexner, Celia Garfinkle and Constance Doe.

DAUGHTER OF COOLIDGE HASTENS TO BIER

While Greater Boston today was just beginning to recover from the shock of Louis A. Coolidge's sudden death, funeral arrangements at the Milton home were held up pending the arrival of a daughter, Margaret, from Kentucky.

Prominent political and industrial leaders from all over New England will attend the services of one of the Bay State's outstanding Republican leaders and the treasurer of the United Shoe Machinery Company for sixteen years.

EXHAUSTED IN CAMPAIGN.

Members of the family declare that the death of Mr. Coolidge was directly traceable to the campaign he waged last Fall for the Republican nomination for United States Senator. Exhausted, as a result of this campaign, Mr. Coolidge went to Florida to recuperate.

He never recovered his health, however, and in March he resigned his position as treasurer of the United Shoe Machinery Company, a position he had filled for sixteen years.

At no time, however, was the condition of Mr. Coolidge regarded as serious. He continued his literary work, appeared frequently in public and went about his affairs as usual.

Just a week ago he spoke before the Braintree Rotary Club and he was scheduled to deliver a Memorial Day address in Milton.

BORN IN 1861.

On Friday he was taken ill, however, and was forced to cancel the Memorial Day engagement. His condition became rapidly worse and he sank steadily until Sunday morning, when death ensued.

He was born in Natick, October 8, 1861, of a family that traced its ancestors to the Pilgrim settlers of Massachusetts.

He was a direct descendant of Lieutenant John Bacon, who was killed at the Battle of Lexington.

His parents were William L. and Sarah Washburn Coolidge, who were born and who died in Natick.

REVOLVER NEW LINK IN CHAIN AROUND KIRBY

Augusta, Me., June 1.—The word of W. E. Ryan of the firm of J. E. Cogen Company is regarded by Maine officials as the missing link in the chain of circumstantial evidence against Harry A. Kirby, held for the brutal murder of Miss Aida Hayward and the shooting of her aunt, Mrs. Emma Towns.

It was Ryan who in 1923 sold a .32-calibre revolver to a man who gave his name as Frank Gilman of West Gardiner.

This revolver, found under the cottage occupied by Kirby and in which the mutilated body of Miss Hayward was found, is believed to have been purchased by Kirby and today the authorities are arranging to have Ryan endeavor to identify Kirby as the purchaser.

Meanwhile, the authorities are giving Kirby the "absent treatment." All prisoners and jail attaches are kept away from the cell of the accused man.

ENGINEER SAYS PHONE EXPENSE DUPLICATED

The sum of $33,456,202 should be sliced from the reproduction and appraisal cost of $160,891,331 made by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company on its plant, William J. Keefe, assistant engineer of the Public Utilities Department, testified today at a continued hearing at the State House on the telephone rate case.

Keefe, put on the stand by Attorney Charles H. Gilmore, special counsel for the department, told of checking up the telephone company's figures in connection with the company's plea for an increase in rates amounting to $12,000,000.

Exhibits put in by Keefe showed that the average assessed value of the company's property in Massachusetts for 1922, 1923, 1924 was only $81,[illegible] as compared with the company's reproduction figure of $114,157,198.

An item of $1,701,521 for engineering expenses included in a grand total of $24,559,938 for central office equipment in Massachusetts should have been deducted, Keefe declared, because it was a duplication of expense.

Latest returns filed by the company with the department indicate the appraisal and inventory made by the company will reach $7,664,000.

HUB MAN SAILS NEW SLOOP TO MARBLEHEAD

Halifax, N. S., June 1 (A.P.).—Two 40-foot "R" class racing sloops, built in Norway for American owners and brought here by steamship recently, sailed from Halifax today for their home ports on the New England coast. The Nordic, owned by Ethel Ford, will go to Bar Harbor, Me., and the other, owned by Dr. Morton Prince of Boston, sailed for Marblehead, Mass.

With good weather their voyages will take about ten days. Both will take part in the international "R" class week at Marblehead this Summer.

HINT BARBARA LA MARR WILL WED 'PAL' AS SIXTH

New York, June 1 (Universal).—Ben Finney had said, "No, we're just pals," but friends believe that Barbara La Marr is going to marry him, even if he is a "pal."

The movie pair sailed suddenly for Europe, and today friends washed out the denials as "diplomatic lies."

If so, Ben would be Barbara's sixth, and she will have to wait until the divorce from her fifth, Jack Daugherty, becomes absolute.

U. S. WARSHIPS IN CHINA MAY QUELL RIOT

Washington, June 1.—Outbreaks of violence in China probably will lead to more American warships being sent to Shanghai at once to aid in protecting foreign lives and property, it was learned today.

In a report to the State Department, Edwin S. Cunningham, United States Consul-General at Shanghai, said foreign police and volunteer services already had been called to maintain order.

With a death toll of fifteen already reported and with further disturbances imminent as the result of the student riots, Cunningham has requested Admiral Thomas Washington of the United States Asiatic Fleet that three American destroyers and one gun boat now in Shanghai harbor be detained to aid in preserving order in the international settlement.

The four war ships were under orders to sail immediately for Chefoo.

All Shanghai food markets have announced they would close tomorrow.

Shanghai's general strike and boycott brought fresh bloodshed and an enlarged casualty list today in a city rife with excitement. Between ten and twenty Chinese were seriously wounded when police fired on a mob again attempting to block traffic on the Nanking road.

Three more deaths brought the toll of the strike to 11 dead in the disturbance following the Chinese protest against discharge of Chinese employes by a Japanese cotton factory.

MICHAEL COLLINS' FIANCEE ENGAGED

Dublin, June 1.—Miss Kitty Kiernan, a comely employee of the Free State government who lost three fiances in the long war for Irish freedom, announces her engagement to General Felix Cronin.

Her first fiance, D. F. Kelleher, a member of the Royal Irish constabulary, was slain in the early fighting which followed the World War.

Harry Boland, a Republican, to whom Miss Kiernan became engaged shortly after Kelleher's death, was killed in 1922.

However, previous to Boland's death, Miss Kiernan had broken off the engagement and had become betrothed to Michael Collins, who was killed in August, 1922.

MATTAPAN AUTOIST JAILED AND FINED

Jacob Lotherstein of No. 9 Duke street, Mattapan, in Roxbury court today was sentenced to one month for operating under the influence of liquor and fined $150 for leaving the scene of an accident without making known his identity.

Laurette Noonan of No. 76 West street, Medford, testified her machine was struck by a car driven by Lotherstein on Massachusetts avenue early on the morning of May 22. The driver continued on his way, she said, but she obtained his license number. She testified she also picked up a hub cap from the other machine.

Miss Noonan said Lotherstein, accompanied by a member of the Boston city government, called at her home and attempted to "fix" the case, but she insisted that it go to trial. Lotherstein denied he was drinking and said some one else was driving the car in which he was a passenger at the time of the accident.

Fitchburg, June 1.—Rev. Dr. Archibald McCord, seventy-three years old, a retired Congregational minister, died here following an illness of five years which resulted from injuries sustained in an automobile accident in Brockton. He had been unable to speak for three years, his vocal organs having been paralyzed.

He held pastorates in New Bedford, Fall River, Attleboro, Suffield, Ct., Keene, N. H., Providence, Taunton and Randolph.

The funeral will be from Rollstone church Tuesday, at 2:30 o'clock with burial Wednesday in North Stonington, Ct.

The jury which began its four-week session in the Superior Criminal Court, Salem, before Judge McLeod today, reported a finding of not guilty in the cases of Nicola Leurzi and Antonio Tripodi, both of Haverhill. They were charged with conspiracy to burn and burning in the night time last Labor Day a store and six-tenement dwelling in which two persons lost their lives.

"Sealed Order Contest" Open to All Aviators in Guard for 2-Hour Flight

Boston Evening American prize.

The contest will be under the supervision of the Race Committee, composed of Massachusetts National Guard officers. They include Major Charles F. Woolley, commanding officer of the 26th Division Air Forces; Captain Harold R. Willis, Captain Clarence E. Hodge, Captain Louis E. Boutwell and Lieutenant George Sprague.

ENDORSE FLIGHT.

These officers have given the flight their hearty endorsement. They are confident it will be such a thrilling event the hundreds of thousands of eye-witnesses will be thrilled with the limitless possibilities of aviation development.

The probability is that landings will be made at Framingham, Brockton and possibly Fairhaven, a suburb of New Bedford.

At least four airplanes will figure in the flight contest. The Massachusetts National Guard now has three planes and a fourth is expected to arrive in a few days from Ohio. Three more have been assigned to the Massachusetts National Guard, and it is possible that one or more of them will be received in time to participate in this vital and interesting contest.

As the flight will be conducted on the 150th anniversary of Bunker Hill day, the race committee, which will supervise the contest, is planning to have each of the planes fly over Bunker Hill Monument to help make Bunker Hill Day celebration more interesting. Bunker Hill Monument, therefore, will be the Mecca of thousands of visitors on June 17.

PRESIDENT ENDORSES HOME-MAKING SURVEY

Washington, June 1 (A.P.).—President Coolidge, in a letter to Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, has endorsed a nation-wide survey of home-making methods being conducted by the federation. He has offered assistance on the part of government departments. The survey will gauge the efficiency of housekeeping in the United States with the idea that no woman can be a successful home-maker unless she is a successful housekeeper.

THOUSANDS SEE WILD WEST PARADE

Thousands of boys and girls and other people, who tried in vain to conceal the fact that they were at all interested, witnessed the parade of the Miller Brothers 101 Ranch and Wild West Show as it wended its way through Boston streets today with cowboys and cowgirls and Indians, gaily decorated and painted in full war regalia, mounted on prancing ponies.

The parade, reminiscent of early days on the great American plains, raised many a thrill as it went through Boston street, to Southampton, to Massachusetts avenue, Columbus avenue to Berkeley street, to Tremont, to Massachusetts avenue to Edward Everett square, and thence to the lot on Boston street, just south of Andrew square.

There are 1,400 people with the show, which opens for a week today at the Boston street lot.

Two colts were born on the lot shortly after the arrival of the show and were promptly named "Boston" and "Massachusetts." Four colts have been born during a week.

CHARLESTOWN MAN'S DEATH MYSTERY

Martin M. McMahon, 46 years old, of No. 3 Lawrence avenue, Charlestown, was found dead early today by his wife, Margaret McMahon.

According to Mrs. McMahon her husband fell downstairs and she, with the aid of neighbors, carried him to his room. She said she believed he had fainted and would be all right in the morning.

When she went to awake him she received no response.

She called a nearby physician and he was pronounced dead.

T. R. MARSHALL EXPIRES AT CAPITAL

when his presence was not required as presiding officer.

Only a nurse was at the bedside, Mrs. Marshall was in an adjoining room. Suddenly slumping down upon the pillows, he passed away without a word, and apparently without pain.

The room in which he died was on the fourth floor of the hotel overlooking F street, Washington's fashionable shopping centre. It was in this hotel that he had resided during his official life in Washington.

The former vice-president had planned a tendday stay in the capital. It was one of the periodic visits he had made here since his retirement from the vice-presidency in 1921, and on these occasions he always had called at the White House to pay his respects to the President.

PLANNED TO SEE COOLIDGE.

The heart attack, which followed quickly on his arrival here last Monday, however, prevented him from making any calls or receiving any callers. Despite his seventy-one years he reacted favorably to the treatment given him by physicians, whose examinations recorded a slow but gradual improvement almost to the end.

Tentative plans were made to take his body to Marion for burial, following out a desire said to have been expressed by the former Vice-President that his final resting place be near that of his father and mother and his foster son, Clarence Morrison, whose death was one of the great sorrows of Mr. Marshall's life.

The child had been taken from a Washington hospital with the consent of the mother, and nursed back to apparent health by the Marshalls, who were childless. He died at the age of ten, after he had been in their care for four years and just as steps were being taken to adopt him legally.

Short services probably will be held also in Washington, with President Coolidge and other high officials in attendance. The body will be taken West on a train leaving Washington tomorrow or Wednesday.

Marshall's Mother Wanted Him to Be a Preacher

Thomas Riley Marshall was born in North Manchester, Wabash County, Indiana, March 14, 1854, the only son of Dr. Daniel M. and Martha A. Patterson Marshall. He attended the public schools and his mother had dreams of him becoming a famous preacher, but the trials of a circuit rider in those days did not appeal to him and after being graduated from Wabash College at Crawfordsville, Indiana, at nineteen years, he read law and was admitted to the bar at Columbia City, Indiana, upon his twenty-first birthday.

When it was suggested that he seek the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Indiana, Mr. Marshall replied that, while his one ambition was to become Governor of his home State, he would do nothing to attain the nomination, although his friends could do what they pleased. When the State convention was held, in Indianapolis later, he was selected as a compromise candidate between the forces of Thomas Taggart, former United States Senator, and the anti-Taggart forces, and won in the bitter 1908 campaign, in which he carried the State by 10,000, while President Taft carried it by 15,000.

PROTECTOR OF CHILDREN.

During four years as governor, his administration was characterized especially by the enactment of legislation looking to the moral and physical welfare of the state's unfortunates. One policy inaugurated by him was that of never allowing a child to be born in prison or a person to die behind the bars if there was a home to which they could go.

Mr. Marshall was nominated for the vice-presidency in Baltimore in 1912 after his name had been before the convention for a number of ballots as a presidential candidate with the Indiana delegation solidly behind him. He was again renominated with President Wilson at St. Louis in 1916.

Mr. Marshall prided himself on the fact that he had always been "just a plain every day average American citizen," democratic and unconventional, and to his neighbors in Columbia city was always affectionately referred to as "Tom."

ONE HOBBY—ADOPTED SON.

He married on Oct. 2, 1895 Miss Lois I. Kimsey of Angola, Indiana. Because of his deep love for his mother he did not marry until she died. The same devotion always existed between him and Mrs. Marshall who always accompanied him on campaign or lecture trips. With the exception of never missing an opportunity to see a baseball game, Mr. Marshall was not an enthusiast over outdoor sports.

As for hobbies, he had just one, and that was Clarence Ignatius Morrison, his little adopted son. While Mrs. Marshall in 1917 was directing a diet kitchen in Washington maintained for the poor children, she was attracted to a sickly little year-old waif. When they went to their summer home in Michigan that Summer, Clarence Ignatius accompanied them. With the mother's consent, the child upon their return was permanently made a member of their household.

Taken by Death

Thomas Riley Marshall, Vice-President under Wilson, passed away today in Washington. The end was sudden—he was reading his Bible when his head fell forward and he was gone.

WOMAN DYING FROM FIRE IN MATTRESS

Mrs. Carolina DeMillico, thirty-five years old, of No. 2 Moon street, North End, is dying at the Haymarket Hospital from burns she suffered when she attempted to beat out a fire in a mattress which she had just completed after two months' work.

The fire started an hour after she had put the new mattress on the bed and invited in her friends to view her product. In her attempt to beat out the flames she was seriously burned about the face, chest, head and arms.

PROBE DEATH OF MAN SHOT BY U. S. AGENT

Colebrook, N. H., May 31 (A.P.).—The fatal shooting of Anton Bilodeau of Sherbrooke, Que., by a United States Federal narcotic agent at the international boundary line, was being investigated by four Federal agents from Boston.

United States Attorney Harry B. Amey is directing a probe of the report Bilodeau was on Canadian soil when shot down.

John Price and Louis Nadeau, companions of Bilodeau who were in the car in which the agents said they found $5,000 worth of narcotics, were held.

The Federal agents declared that Bilodeau stopped the bullet on American soil, but staggered onward for 100 feet across the line before he fell.

COOLIDGE URGED TO USE SPECIAL TRAIN

Washington, June 1 (A.P.).—Emphasizing the necessity of adequate safety precautions, railroad officials have persuaded President Coolidge to do his train riding on private cars rather than share the regular accommodations with other passengers.

The President will travel in a private train to St. Paul, Minn., where on June 8 he will deliver an address at the Norse-American centennial. It is probable also a special car will be used when Mr. Coolidge goes to Swampscott, Mass., late in June on his vacation.

One other trip is scheduled for Mr. Coolidge before the White House is moved to New England. Next Wednesday he will motor to Annapolis to address the graduating class at the Naval Academy.

Oil is Power

Most motorists think of lubricating oil merely as something to reduce friction between moving metal parts. While this is a very necessary thing, the principal function of a good lubricating oil is to preserve and conserve power by sealing, as completely as possible, the piston head union in the combustion chamber.

A poor lubricating oil cannot do this successfully or completely. The tremendous heat at which motors operate will break down and thin down oils of insufficient body. The result is loss of power and excessive crankcase dilution.

Socony Motor Oil is refined to meet the requirements of all types of motors now on the market.* Highly heat-resisting, it yet has sufficient viscosity to effect an efficient leak-proof seal around the piston head. It consumes cleanly.

Insist upon Socony Motor Oil; resist cheap and spurious imitations.

Always consult the reliable Socony Lubrication Chart. It tells exactly — summer or winter — the proper grade of Socony for your engine.*

Remember that SOCONY is "Standard"

CROWLEY LAUDS DOLLAR-YEAR POLICY

CITY POLICE HEAD OBTAINS POLICY FOR HIMSELF

Five dead, thirty-seven injured. This was the total of automobile accidents during the last twenty-four hours in the State of Massachusetts alone.

Add to these the less spectacular accidents that fail to come to the attention of the newspapers and you have a reason for not delaying any longer in taking out Boston Evening American insurance.

"I want to congratulate the Boston Evening American for its offer to its subscribers of an accident insurance policy in the amount of $7,500," said Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley, as he signed on the dotted line one of the extraordinary policies offered by this newspaper.

An endorsement from such a man, a policeman who has been through the ruck and is now in a high place, who has seen all the misery that falls more perhaps under the eye of a policeman than any other citizen, is an endorsement indeed.

But Superintendent Crowley is not the only endorser. Thousands of applications for policies have been received. In only part of one day last week 1,500 applications, both from Home Delivery subscribers and those wishing to become Home Delivery subscribers, buried the insurance department.

MANY APPLICATIONS.

So many applications have poured in, in fact, that fully half of them have not even been listed yet and a full count has not been taken. The world of New England apparently is eager to "play safe" if the price of playing is made reasonable enough.

Said Superintendent Crowley, after signing his policy:

"From many years' experience as a police officer I believe I can honestly say that no person living knows when an accident is about to happen and there is no body of men in the world, with the exception, perhaps, of a hospital surgeon, who handles more accident cases in a year than the policemen.

"In cases where a man is the sole support of a father and mother or a wife and young children, it is really neglect of duty on his part, in my opinion, to fail to provide sufficient insurance to protect his aged parents or his wife and children n the event of accident.

"In the morning reports at police headquarters, we read of accidents in great numbers daily. For information of the Boston Evening American readers and the rest of the public, the police during 1924 handled 6,761 accident cases, an average of eighteen cases a day.

"Another interesting fact not heard by the general public ordinarily is the high total of police officers in full uniform injured in the discharge of their duties, a total of 302 men during 1924, with a total number of 2,796 days lost from duty as a result.

"If so many accidents happen to policemen in full uniform, what chance has the general public?

"For the remarkably low premium required, $1 a year, every man and woman over fifteen years of age, should be interested in the plan of the Boston Evening American, and just as soon as possible, even if they have to borrow the money, they should take out one of these accident insurance policies."

Act now! Tomorrow may be too late.

All that is necessary for Home Delivery subscribers or intended subscribers, to obtain one of the $1-a-year accident insurance policies, is to clip out the coupon printed in this newspaper, fill it out, and bring or send it to the Boston Evening American office, Insurance Department, No. 5 Winthrop square, Boston, with $1.

TAKES OUT EVENING AMERICAN POLICY

Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley and Headquarters Reporter Harold A. Noonan of the Boston Evening American examining the $7,500 accident insurance policy. Superintendent Crowley was warm in his praise of the enterprise shown by the Boston Evening American in offering protection to its readers at a nominal cost, after taking out a policy himself.

Friday, the closing day of the convention, there will be an executive session for honorary and active members and their representatives at 10:30 a. m., when the report of the committee on resolutions will be made by George T. Peckham, followed by general discussion on resolutions submitted by the committee.

The exposition in Exhibition Hall will be open daily during the convention, from 1 to 11 o'clock.

The last confectioners' convention in this city was thirty-one years ago.

MARY'S DOUBLE FOOLED BAND OF PLOTTERS

had perfected plans to hold Miss Pickford for $200,000 ransom.

Mary's "Double" Followed by Trio Over Holywood

Los Angeles, June 1 (Universal Service).—The conspirators who were planning to kidnap Mary Pickford chased her "double" all over Hollywood and didn't know it.

This fact was brought out today during investigation of the three men, C. A. Stevens, Claude Holcomb and A. A. Woods, who were arrested here in a gigantic kidnaping plot aimed not only at "America's sweetheart," but at Pola Negri, Jackie Coogan and a grandson of E. L. Doheny.

During the period when Miss Pickford, cognizant of the plot and secretly guarded, was being followed daily by the conspirators, it was a humble "extra girl," who, part of the time, occupied "Little Mary's" car and led the van in this novel hare and hound's chase.

Her name is Doris Sybil and she is the image of Mary. In some of the "long shots" at the Fairbanks-Pickford studio she doubles for Miss Pickford.

And what a thrill was hers! Dressed in Mary's clothes, she would climb into the automobile, trying to look unconcerned, but as soon as she pulled away from the curb the kidnapers would be on her trail.

But she also knew that a second machine, following unobtrusively, was filled with guards and sawed-off shotguns. Every time a car even started to draw alongside of her a rippling chorus of shivers must have run down the Sybil-Pickford spine?

A fifth possible objective by the gang was revealed today by Billy Woods, one member of the trio who has confessed.

Woods says they had their eye on the grandson of a multi-millionaire living on Rosemary boulevard, Hollywood. The grandfather is afflicted with heart trouble, and Captain Hume and his detectives have not told him of the plot aimed at his heir. It is probable they never will tell him.

FOREIGN COMMUNISTS AT BRISTOL MEETING

A NEW HELP FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Ready Prepared Chocolate Sauce a Time Saver

I would like every member of the WNAC American Women's Club to become acquainted with the delicious new chocolate sauce Sat-Ten made by the Sat-Ten Mfg. Company, and now on sale at all leading grocery stores.

Unlike most ready prepared thin watery sauces, Sat-Ten chocolate sauce is a rich creamy mixture with considerable body and a most delicious flavor. It comes to you all ready for use in half pint, pint, and quart glass jars. One or two teaspoonfuls stirred into a cup of hot milk will give you a perfect cup of chocolate and for iced chocolate, eggnogs and milk shakes and frostings, it is a wonder worker.

Use hot or cold, on ice cream or desserts, it is rich and smooth with a real caramel effect—not just a sticky sweet syrup. No sweetening and no flavoring is required and for breakfasts, luncheons and suppers, afternoon or evening callers, picnic parties and that unexpected guest, this ready prepared chocolate sauce is a blessing.

Once you become acquainted with Sat-Ten I know you will always want to keep a jar in your house and be prepared at all times with a delicious refreshment.

Would you like to have a little leaflet telling you more about what I believe is the very finest chocolate sauce that has ever been produced? Shall I send you a leaflet of suggestions and recipes for using this economical and wholesome fruit syrup?

THE SUMMER BEVERAGE SEASON OPENS

Fruit Syrup as Auto Accessory

The summer motoring season is on with a bang and while the wayside and motor inns offer a pleasant variety to the day's trip, for the larger families these stops do eat alarmingly into the housekeeping budget unless father is open-hearted enough to consider Sunday and holiday outings his treat.

This is just one of the many reasons why Za-Rex, the real fruit juice syrup, can rightly be considered as a regular auto accessory. Most of us are familiar with the sudden motoring thirsts that are so insistent that it seems as if we could not wait to get to the nearest haven for refreshments, and some times these havens are few and far between. But with a little pint jug of Za-Rex in the car you can have a luscious fresh fruit drink at any country spring or pump. Just pour the Za-Rex into ice-cold water and from one little pint jar you can have twenty brimming tumblers full of this delicious fruit drink.

Best of all you will know that you are providing for your family a drink that is pure and healthful, that will make your trip a pleasure from start to finish.

Besides motoring trips, Za-Rex is invaluable in the home in making appetizing desserts, icings, frostings, hot drinks for sudden colds, fruit syrups and sauces for ice cream, puddings, waffles, etc. So you see besides being a delicious beverage Za-Rex forms an ideal and convenient method for including valuable fruit juices in the daily diet of the entire family.

Shall I send you a leaflet of suggestions and recipes for using this economical and wholesome fruit syrup?

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUMMER DESSERTS

The Value of Gelatine

In the Spring, just as surely as the young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love, the housewife's thoughts turn to how to tempt flagging Spring appetites.

Desserts are an especial problem, for the family that has eagerly devoured pies and puddings all Winter now look at them with critical eyes and peck at them disdainfully.

Gelatine desserts are always the housewife's white hope in the Spring and Summer. They are easily digested, nourishing and can be made most attractive to the eye and palate. So I know you will all be glad to hear of the new gelatine desserts which have just been placed on the market by the Royal Baking Powder Company. Just the name assures you that this product will be the best in its field, just as Royal Baking Powder has always stood for the utmost in purity and quality.

These delicious desserts are a mixture of the finest gelatine, sugar, fruit acid, vegetable colorings and pure fruit flavors, and by fruit flavors I mean flavoring taken from the fresh fruit itself, not synthetic mixtures.

These gelatines come in four assortments, Raspberry, Strawberry, Lemon and Orange (since these are practically the only flavorings that can actually be made from the fresh fruits themselves).

Another thing about these Royal Gelatine Desserts that I am sure will appeal to you as strongly as it did to me is that they "set" so quickly.

The packages come in the usual proportion of one envelope of fruit gelatine to two cups of liquid, but instead of mixing it with two cups of boiling water you dissolve the gelatine mixture in one cup of boiling water and then add one cup of ice cold water and your gelatine is firm in no time.

I am very sure that you will find that every member of your family will enjoy this brand new product and if you will drop me a line I will be very glad to send you an attractive booklet giving many new suggestions and recipes for most attractive desserts. This is one of the gilt-edge food products that is a real pleasure to me to recommend.

A SUGGESTION FOR THE BRIDE

Ices for the Wedding Breakfast or Reception

Eighty-three thousand eight hundred and fifty-two letters have been written to Martha Lee since June first of last year by members of the WNAC American Women's Club and a very considerable percentage of these letters have been requests from brides for suggestions for wedding refreshments.

Of course ice cream there must be and if one is fortunate enough to be able to leave the refreshment problem in the hands of a competent caterer, the fancy ices are invariably delicious and the bill invariably large. However, few of us are averse to saving a few pennies or pounds even at the all important wedding feast, and I know you will be glad to hear that it is now possible for you to order the most attractive fancy ices, with or without spun sugar, directly from the plant of the H. P. Hood and Sons Company.

These fancy ices, in an endless variety of attractive fruit and flower shapes and colorings, are sold by the dozen and are delivered right in your home, very carefully packed. There is no fussing with scoops, hot water, etc.

The prices are surprisingly reasonable as compared with the usual caterer's figures, and if you take my advice and include them in your wedding refreshments, you will be sure to serve something that your guests will remember for many months to come.

Drop me a line if you would like to know more about the different varieties and prices of these new and interesting ices.

And don't forget that ice cream in bulk or brick form in various flavors is a solution of the Sunday summer dessert problem and the emergency evening refreshment. A big spoonful in a glass of ginger ale, on a slice of sponge cake, with chocolate sauce, or served with crushed fruits are just a few suggestions.

Of course it is most necessary that the ice cream should be pure and in suggesting Hood's ice creams to you, I know I am recommending a product made under perfect conditions of sanitation and from pure milk and cream that pass every possible test.

TETLEY'S

There are many kinds of tea, but only one Tetley's

BECKER CASE CRACKS LOWRIE'S NERVE

mail and impudence to relieve the suffering of fellow beings with sad scenes between husbands and wives, lovers and children, sane and numbers of daily occurrence. The place was like a boiling pot—like the witches' cauldron in "Macbeth." And new victims for the "chair" would arrive with sickening frequency.

The first two "chair" victims under Osborne were Chinamen, Lee Dock and Eng Hing. Former wardens had held executions a few minutes after midnight on Monday mornings—the law giving the wardens the right to inflict the death penalty at any time during a specified week, beginning at midnight Sunday.

By holding executions in the dead of Monday morning, the gruesome "job" was disposed of early in the week. Osborne changed the time of executions to 8 a. m. Friday. He would have made it Saturday, but decided it were better to have a day of grace for the consummation of matters in the event of any slip or accident. Condemned men were thereby given four extra days of life under his administration—and while there is life there is always hope. The death house contained 14 cells, and these cells were nearly always all occupied.

The most prominent of the condemned men at that time was Charles Becker, a lieutenant of police in New York city, who had been convicted of implication in the murder of Herman Rosenthal, a noted gambler.

Execution Time Changed to Friday

As I learned inside acts about this case, as well as details of some of the other cases, it became miserable. Becker had been a policeman all his life, and I had not much love or sympathy for policemen, as a class. I do not mean to create the impression that I believe police unnecessary, nor that there are not some square and manly policemen. But I know from personal experience and from cases I had authenticated that police methods in general were cruel and inhuman, and that the majority of policemen lowright entirely of the fact that they are supposed to be public servants, not autocratic tyrants. The majority of prisoners hold this viewpoint, and well they may.

The case weighed more or less heavily on everybody's mind, especially on those guys when brave little Mrs. Becker came up to the prison to see her doomed husband. I kept imbibing more and more freely from my private carboy of sherry to help get my mind off these things.

One of the first moves of the Golden Rule Brotherhood was to present Osborne with thirteen requests, the chief of which were permission to have visits from friends and relatives on Sundays and holidays and the removal of the heavy double screens from the visiting room.

Prior to Osborne's advent the rule had been that visits could be had only on week days, a limitation that barred working persons from seeing their incarcerated loved ones, save by the sacrificing of a day's wages, which many of them could ill afford.

Under the old system the prisoners had been locked in the rat holes, already described, from Saturday afternoon until Monday morning, and always on holidays, so that the guards might get time off. Of course, it isn't fair, nor is it healthy, to deny recreation to a prison guard, but it is manifestly more unhealthy and unfair to keep prisoners locked up in disease-breeding cells, merely that guards may have relaxation. It was also unfair that the working relatives of prisoners should be debarred the most available and economic days for visiting their "black sheep."

Twelve Requests of Prisoners Granted

By inaugurating a three-shift system of guard duty the warden was able to grant this request for Sunday and holiday visits, and eleven of the other requests, and there was great rejoicing. The request to have the screens removed from the visiting room was held in reserve, to be granted later should the prisoners respond appreciatively to the other privileges just extended.

In passing, I might say that the screens which the prisoners sought to have removed extended from floor to ceiling, running parallel about two feet apart through the middle of the visiting room. The screens were of heavy, closely interwoven wire, with a guard at the end to see that nothing was "passed."

"How could anything be passed through such a barricade?" you ask. By means of a tiny rubber hose, or by using wires. It was claimed by the old time prisoners that all previous attempts to have these screens abolished had been frustrated by unscrupulous whisky and dope peddling guards who had a monopoly on the illicit traffic. Yet whiskey and dope had been passed countless times through the public screen at Sing Sing in the old days—exemplifying the truth that the harder you make a thing to get the harder a prisoner will try to get it. The poorer the food the more he schemes to smuggle in contraband; the higher the wall the more he plots to escape over it; the harsher the discipline, the greater the number of fractured rules. That's human nature, in prison and out.

Way Paved for Breaking of Rules

Methods in vogue at many American prisons today, notably at the Arizona State prison, where I now write, offer prisoners wide open avenues for breaking rules, for escaping, for "beating" the officials—and they don't do it. The reason is that they are not seething with hatred; that they have real hope for self-redemption through self-control. The result is a lower percentage of repeaters. I know what I am talking about. Osborne saw it all clearly long before any of the so-called penologists began reluctantly to admit it.

Notwithstanding this distinct gain for the prisoners through their Golden Rule Brotherhood it became known to the inmates that their organization was not as effective and successful as the Mutual Welfare League at Auburn, and someone suggested that a committee of prisoners be elected for the purpose of visiting Auburn and studying the system there, provided permission for such a trip could be secured. This permission was granted. Then a committee of Auburn prisoners came to Sing Sing to see if there was anything in the brotherhood methods that might be adopted to advantage at Auburn.

Questioned by Men Once in San Quentin

After that exchange of visits a sentiment for replacing the brotherhood at Sing Sing with the Welfare League system grew rapidly. Day after day I was stopped in the yard by different prisoners, some of whom I had known at San Quentin years before, and confidentially asked if it were really true that the prisoners at Auburn had full control of their own court and disciplinary measures, or was it a fact that no case against an offender taken by the court at Auburn did not become a matter of the prison house to punish later against him when he applied for parole or clemency.

Repeatedly I assured such inquirers that I had been at Auburn and seen the daily workings of the league there and that it was absolutely a fact that the men governed themselves and jealously guarded the many new privileges designed to promote health and comfort and future hopes. One man wanted to know who "prosecuted" cases, and when I told him "no one," he was puzzled.

I went on to explain that a Welfare League member at Auburn was never tried in the ordinary sense of the word, but that the charges against him were "investigated" by the principal court, and a decision reached solely on the testimony of witnesses, the man charged being considered as one of the witnesses, not as a defendant.

"You see," I added, "a prison community has to have law and order just like outside. Only in that way can men survive and enjoy their rights, their liberty. The better the prisoners govern themselves, by taking offending members to task, the greater the number and variety of privileges, or rights. And all the time they're doing this they are unconsciously breaking away from old habits, from old beliefs, and fitting themselves to fall in and become good citizens after release. It's just a plain matter of self-interest through the application of the principle of the greatest good for the greatest number, whereas, in the old prison days it was a matter of the least good for everybody concerned."

Of course, those were not my exact words. I was much more explicit. It became apparent at each succeeding mass gathering of the prisoners for discussions that they were becoming ripe for the adoption of the league principles, with flaming gallingering and other insubordinations already becoming less frequent.

MRS. HENRY DEAN QUINBY, the former Alice Onderdonck, who is to be an attendant at the marriage ceremonial of Miss Eleanor Musgrave and John Gardiner Flint next Saturday in Emmanuel Church.

SOCIETY TRAVELS A GAY PACE this week to the tune of weddings and open air horse shows, boxing carnivals and al fresco fetes with Sweet Charity in the background. Of the weddings and all the attending details which intrigue bride and bridegrooms, there are no less than six.

THE MILLWOOD HUNT HORSE SHOW at the Reginald W. Bird estate, Waverley Farm in Framingham is a sporting event of much distinction and interest, commences on Friday afternoon and continues all day Saturday.

IN THE MIDWEEK the famous old New England Society "with the long name" stages a tea primarily for Junior attendance at the Prince street, Jamaica Plain estate of Mr. and Mrs. Gaspar G. Bacon known far and wide as the old home of the late Robert Bacon, father of Mr. Bacon.

EVERYTHING DEAR to the heart of the young sters, grabs and ponies rides, a fish pond and various delectables of school days may be had in exchange for the small coins such as childish purses hold.

FOR THE ELDERS there will be an interest in visiting this lovely old estate, with its spacious grounds and stately manor house of fine old Massachusetts tradition and background.

'INTRODUCE ME' IS GOOD FARCE AT FENWAY

Douglas MacLean Scores in Newest Film of Alpine Mountain Climbing

For all those who patiently waited for the "better and finer" in the films, Douglas MacLean, in "Introduce Me," which opened at the Fenway Saturday, should satisfy the most meticulous, for here is a farce that is a great deal better and more to much finer than most screen comedies.

Although having a French locale, "Introduce Me" is by no means a French farce in the sense that it is at all risque and, moreover, it is totally absolute from pie throwing, slapstickery, and many other slap-happy artifices of laugh pulling.

Douglas MacLean, as plain Jimmy Hughes, is an American tourist seeking the sights in Paris with his friend Herbert Baker. Of all the "girls" none is so beautiful as Betty (Anne Cornwall, another American tourist, whom he first sees in a railroad station about to start for the Alps with her pa, to witness a mountain climbing contest.

Both young men are smitten at once with Betty, but the more enterprising Herbert succeeds in being introduced and invited to join the party while poor Jimmy succeeds only in incurring the wrath of the girl's father when he tries to "horn in" too.

In posing as J. K. Roberts, the great American mountain climber, Jimmy, despite his handicap at the start, goes over big with all hands, gets in on the festivities, is ace high with the girl and everything is perfectly glorious until the arrival of the real Roberts, who is infuriated with the masquerade.

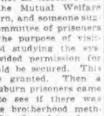
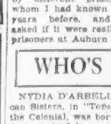
WHO'S WHO AND ALL THAT

NYDIA D'ARBELL, with the Duncan Sisters, in "Topsy and Eva," at the Colonial, was born in New York, but received her education in Russia, France and Poland. Her father is a Polish nobleman and her mother is a Californian. While singing in St. Luke's Episcopal Church in New York she Nydia d'Arnell was engaged by George M. Cohan as understudy for Elisabeth Hines in "The O'Brien Girl" and was re-engaged for "Little Nellie Kelly." Before joining "Topsy and Eva" she was prima donna with Ed Wynn's "The Perfect Fool."



GEORGIA O'RAMEY, with "No, No, Nanette," at the Tremont, was born in Mansfield, Ohio. Her childish idea of a big city was Columbus, and upon leaving college, walked right into a local stock company and landed a place. She Georgia O'Ramey played summer stock in Akron and Toledo; made her first Broadway hit in "Seven Days"; played also in "The Charge One," "Around the Map," "Miss Springtime," "Leave It to Jane," "The Velvet Lady," "Oui, Madame," and "Dearest." In the latter piece she was co-starred with Frank Tinney.



CORA FRYE, with "Rose Marie" at the Shubert, is a Providence girl, and like her companion in the cast, Desiree Ellinger, came from grand opera. She sang roles with the Manhattan Civic Opera company in New York and scored so well with Ferruccio Pentina in "Tagliacci" that Arthur Hammerstein induced her to join "Rose Marie" in a minor role to understudy the principal part. She will be featured in a special "Rose Marie" company that opens in Minneapolis on August 17th.

LILLIAN LEITZEL, the star gymnast with the Ringling Circus, has followed the vocation of her forbears. She is the fourth generation of aerial performers on her mother's side. She was born in Vienna of English and Austrian parentage and for professional reasons adopted the name of her mother, Mme. Leitzel, who was a Viennese. Most of her professional career has been spent in Europe, but she is well known to vaudeville patrons in this country by reason of many engagements as a member of the Ringling-Barnum circus.

A correspondent complains that the advertisements of "Seven-Eleven" call attention to a "chorus of creole beauties" in an all-colored show. He very properly reminds Tom Henry of the Gayety that creoles are not negroes.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Mr. Hammerstein Flits In and Out

Although he claims to have made $2,000,000 and lost it, Arthur Hammerstein has found it possible to dig up expenses for a trip to Boston to cast a critical eye upon "Rose-Marie" at the Shubert. A fourth company is in preparation.

POPULAR SONGS NOT ALWAYS IN TUNE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THERE is little, if anything, laid down in the book of rules that will give aid and comfort to the ambitious composer who is training his eye and his talents upon what may be called the popular song hit. Taken as they come and go, a heavy preponderance of popular songs are atrociously mediocre in both lyric and score, but in that small detail the whistling, humming public takes, apparently, a very slight interest. There is something deeper than good music in a popular song—rather it is the unification of varied arts, with a dash of your old and well known friend, Mr. Applied Psychology on the side. In any event that is the opinion of Louise Groody, of "No, No, Nanette," who has done very well on her own account in making "I Want To Be Happy" one of the liveliest of the best sellers in the music shops.

OF course, Miss Groody insists that "I Want to Be Happy" falls into that rare class of musical works that charms by merit and not by some particularly gifted manner of presentation. It is not easy to dispute with a pretty young woman who knows her own mind and is willing to express it in full volume. "And, besides," voiced the young woman, "notwithstanding expert opinion and all that rot, sales tell the real story; now, don't they? And if sales didn't tell the story what about the hunch Mr. Winninger and I start every night at the Tremont when the first bars of the song are struck by our hard working union musicians?"

There was only one retort worth attempting. "Then you must consider 'Yes, We Have No Bananas' another rattling high class melody." That should have been a poser—but it wasn't.

"Of course, that is a great song, human in its appeal—deliciously human and humorous—and it has an irresistible melody. It is not a song for the highbrows or the thoughtful student in music, but it touches popular fancy—it has ring and rhythm and lifts your spirits. That's what I like in a song—something that will raise your spirits and 'brighten the corner,' as Billy Sunday puts it."

"But you never hear 'Bananas' now," you parried in an effort to hold your ground.

"No, and you don't hear much about Rutherford B. Hayes either, though he was once President of the United States and won a medal for conspicuous bravery as a soldier in the Civil War. Both have served their time and purpose—and served them well."

LOUISE GROODY
Making Songs Popular Is Her Bright Task

Here was a new angle on the theory of popular songs. Mixing them with statesmen and soldiers certainly presented new and unique possibilities.

"WHETHER you believe it or not," Miss Groody was saying, "music, if it is not too bad, and sometimes even bad music, provides an inspirational note that cannot be discounted. What would the soldier be without his music? From the time brass bands were first devised men have been moved to heroic deeds through the strains of martial airs. Governments recognize that and every army has its full quota of musicians. And those bands do not always play good music—or even play well whatever music they attempt. But they do stir the imagination and raise the spirits of the men. That is what I like about 'I Want to Be Happy.' It has a true ring—an invitation to go out and do good by making somebody else happy. And don't forget that women used to weep over Paderewski. But that is another story."

When Miss Groody first told me she really felt the lifting quality of 'I Want to Be Happy" could not resist it, in fact—mental reservations seemed to be in order. But at last she was convincing.

MAKING songs popular is an old art in which but few are skilled. Miss Groody's success, of course, is her own, though there is coincidence in the fact that her singing partner in "No, No, Nanette" is Charles Winninger, whose good wife, Blanche Ring, did more to make bad music endearing than any artist of this generation. What the music publishers owe Miss Ring in devotion and good will never can be paid, and there are signs that Louise Groody is neatly stepping into that lady's pretty slippers.

MacLean, Once a Heavy Actor, Turns Comedian

Douglas MacLean is one of the few screen comedians who have graduated from heavy drama into light comedy. That's why his brand new success, "Introduce Me," now at the Fenway, is so hilariously funny. MacLean learned just what is serious on the stage and on the screen and therefore knows that seriousness and comedy are but a hair-breadth apart. Through long experience he has learned just how to turn a thrilling dramatic incident into hilarious comedy.

Clothes Make Good Actors, Declares Alice Terry

Alice Terry is firmly convinced that clothes do not make the man or woman, but does think that they have a certain psychological effect upon others, especially while appearing before the camera. "I noticed in my own case," says Miss Terry, "that when I am wearing gorgeous clothes ing at Loew's Orpheum.

Alice Terry.

I immediately feel the part I am playing. Rich clothes and beautiful surroundings influence me greatly, and I can easily fall into a role backgrounded by luxury and beauty.

"On the other hand," continues Miss Terry, "ugly clothes do not give me the same help." Miss Terry plays the leading feminine role in "Confessions of a Queen," now showing at Loew's Orpheum.

FILM REVEALS GIRLS' NEW PROBLEMS

Problems and temptations that their grandmothers never knew confront modern girls, according to Rheuna Medwick, author of the sensational novel, "Chickie," the picturization of which is shown this week at Gordon's Scollay Square Theatre. "Chickie" is the story of a Boston business girl and the plot illustrates the thought expressed by the author in the newspaper interview.

The writer declared that the changes in the economic situation of women during two generations is what makes the problems and temptations of the modern girls so difficult. "Two generations ago women were never supposed to support themselves or to be independent," Miss Medwick said. "But now all is different; girls take their places in the business world, are thrown upon their own resources and are expected to compete with men.

"The disappointments and bitter sorrows some of these modern girls suffer I have tried to show in the story 'Chickie,' and I think there is a moral and a warning, besides entertainment, for every girl in the story."

Dix Not Able to Hold Back an Impulse to Jump

Did you ever have one of those dreams in which you seem to be falling from a great height? Richard Dix says he had one when he was a kid and he thought he was going to experience the real thing during the filming of "The Shock Punch," the picture at Loew's State this week. He was sitting on a beam at one corner of the 25th floor of a building in course of construction. The camera, on another beam behind him, was supposed to get a shot of Richard looking out over New York harbor. Dix stuck it out for several minutes, then had to call all bets off. First, he said, the stiff wind made him feel as if he were going to be blown off; then there was that curious desire to jump, and finally, it seemed as if the whole building was swaying and just ready to topple over.

ADAMS KIN TO PLAY ROLES IN PAGEANT

Descendants of Noted Family to Represent Ancestors in Quincy Program

Direct descendants of men who helped make American history will take their parts in the pageant to be staged in commemoration of the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of Quincy during the week of June 7-13.

The part of John Adams, second President of the United States, will be taken by John Adams, his great-grandson. Mr. Adams's brother, Henry, will portray the part of the Hon. Charles Francis Adams, United States Minister to England during the war between the States, and a cousin, Arthur Adams, will play the character of Thomas Boylston Adams, an ancestor, one of the sons of John Adams, who was chief justice of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts.

The part of John Quincy Adams will be taken by Charles Francis Adams, great-grandson of the sixth President of the United States.

The part of the Rev. John Wheelwright will be taken by the Rev. Fred Alban Weil, the ninth pastor of the First Parish Church since Mr. Wheelwright held the pastorate.

The part of John Hancock, also a pastor of the First Church, will be played by the Rev. Howard Key Bartow, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, a descendant of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner."

The pageant will be produced on the lower field of Merrymount Park, near the spot where Captain Morton and his band of followers danced around the historic May pole and shocked the villagers with what they referred to as "Bacchanalian revels."

CLOWN AND DOG HAVE STRANGE CONTRACT

Fred Stelling and his dog, Dan, who have made a joint contract reading: "Till death do us part." They are important members of the Ringling Circus group, which arrives in another week.

"My dog Dan!"

If you should happen behind the scenes of that mysterious region of circusland where the 800 performers with the Ringling circus are installed, you may come upon "Butterfly" Fred Stelling, one of the famous clowns, teaching his fox-terrier new tricks.

"Dan" and Fred are inseparable. In and out of the ring they are "pals." They have a joint contract —"Till death do us part."

Years ago, Stelling had another dog, "Bob," who was his boon companion till "Bob" died of old age.

"They say time heals all wounds," says Stelling, "and 'Bob's' successor, 'Dan,' has almost reconciled me to his loss. I've taught 'Dan' all of 'Bob's' tricks and he's mastered a new one—he can sneeze like a human."

BUNKER HILL PROGRAM FULL OF COLOR

School Children, Boy Scouts and Elks to Assist in Celebration

Three thousand members of Greater Boston lodges of Elks, 2,000 Charlestown public and parochial school pupils and more than 1,000 Boy Scouts from different sections of the Metropolitan district are now enrolled as participants in various phases of Charlestown's impending celebration of the 150 anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill, on Wednesday, June 17.

Twenty different committees are at work upon details of the celebration.

Virtually every Elk contingent in line is to have a picturesque motor float, and prizes will be awarded for the best of these. Other fraternities have been cordially invited to send representative delegations for the celebration.

TRAINING YOUTH PORTRAYED.

The Boy Scouts are to have the better part of the forenoon to themselves in putting on their show. Chief Marshal Edward S. Hoche and Executive Scout Donald North are arranging this program, the first number of which will be a parade from Bunker Hill monument to the Sullivan square playground, where a striking demonstration will be given of the manner of training boys from the days of the discovery of America up to the present.

Training of Indian youth to the use of bow and arrow and in tests of strength and endurance, the training of American youth for the Westward pioneer movement about 1,700 which succeeded; opposition to the Stamp Act, the Paul Revere incident and the Spirit of '76 are to be depicted.

PROGRAM AT MONUMENT.

Then "Lincoln Freeing the Slaves" is to be staged, after which will come demonstration of contemporary Boy Scout activities. All present are to take the oath of allegiance, after which the parade back to the Monument will start.

From 10:30 to noon, at the monument, the school children will enact a colorful demonstration under supervision of Miss Julia E. Sullivan of Wolcott School, and her assistants. Perhaps the most impressive incident to this feature will be the representation of the forty-eight States of the Union, by as many Charlestown High School girls.

BUILDINGS DECORATED.

The 2,000 pupils will later form the letters of the names of Bunker Hill's heroes—Warren, Prescott, Putnam. St. Catherine's school pupils are to present tableaux—"Battle" and "Death." St. Mary's school pupils are to form a living flag.

Flags or bunting will appear upon the facades of every building in Charlestown on Bunker Hill Day, if the committee's plan carries. Particular attention is to be paid to the decoration of buildings along the route of the great afternoon parade. At the monument a triumphal arch is to be erected, and the present-day flags of the thirteen original States are to be worked into the decorative scheme here.

'L' AND UNION TO FIGHT ON ARBITRATION

Brand New Plan to Be Submitted to Arbiters Despite Protests of Employes

While a bitter controversy over wages between the trustees of the Boston Elevated and the Street Carmen's Union seems inevitable, yet the wage issue has suddenly been submerged over efforts of the Elevated trustees to bring about a new method of arbitrating wage disputes.

Under the present method of selecting the board of arbitration which passes on wage questions, the trustees appoint one member, the union appoints a member and these two select the third man.

Now the trustees have announced that they favor a plan whereby each side would appoint a member of the board and the Governor of the State would appoint the third member.

Union officials today declared that they would under no circumstances submit a proposed change in the method of arbitration to the present board of arbitration. A hard fought controversy over this question is anticipated.

Coolidge to Give Dummy Diploma to Film Star

Washington, June 1 (A.P.)—The Navy Department's publicity scheme to have Ramon Navarro, movie acter, line up with the graduates at Annapolis next Wednesday and receive from President Coolidge a dummy diploma, the whole event to be filmed, will go through as scheduled, so far as Secretary Wilbur is concerned.

"I regard the matter as settled," the secretary declared, adding that he had not planned to talk with the President about it. At the White House it was said some officials were dubious about the plan to involve the President in a publicity venture.

PASTOR SCORES BRETHREN AS PACIFISTS

Refusal to Serve in Future Wars Arouses Ire of Minister-Veteran

Willimantic, Ct., June 1.—Accusing the Willimantic Ministers' Union of being disloyal to the nation and a disgrace to Christianity, the Rev. James G. Graham made a spirited attack upon the organization and all pacifists in a belated Decoration Day sermon at the Windham Centre Congregational Church.

"Their pacifist activities insult the memories of those who died for the Flag," he cried.

Mr. Graham is known as "the fighting parson." He was in the World War; was wounded and taken prisoner. Mrs. Graham supports him in his "anti-pacifism," and says their two boys will get military training when they are old enough.

At a recent meeting of the Ministers' Union certain statements are alleged to have been made by the Rev. F. W. Tholen of Stafford Springs and approved by the ministers. Among them the statement that "we of the clergy cannot see that we should offer our services in any of the future wars of the country."

The "fighting pastor" asked an opportunity to answer the Rev. Mr. Tholen at the May meeting. It was denied. Then he resigned from the union.

REAL ESTATE BOOM ON IN JERUSALEM

Jerusalem, June 1 (Universal Cable).—A real estate boom has hit Jerusalem, again turning Palestine into a land of milk and money—for the real estate speculator. The influx of Zionists is the cause. A hotel, to be eleven stories high and to cost more than $460,000, is being built by an American company on King George street. The site alone cost more than $100,000. Land in the business district is selling at the rate of $25 a square yard. On the site of the old Arabian village of Afule a thousand square meters of land sells for $100. Two hundred and eighty lot purchasers have obligated themselves to begin building within six months.

MRS. LONGWORTH TO GIVE PAULINA FEE FOR PICTURE

Washington, June 1 (A.P.)—Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, wife of the speaker-designate of the House, has been sitting for a portrait to be used in the advertising of a well known beauty cream.

The $5,000 which Mrs. Longworth will receive under the contract for use of the portrait will accrue, it is understood, to the bank account of her daughter, Paulina, who came into the world some three months ago.

"—just what I have been looking for—"

Dear Mother:

You know I told you in last week's letter that I was going to move. Well, I've found the most wonderful place, just what I have been looking for, and I am going to move in today.

Friday I made up my mind that I was just going to find another room. So at noon when I went out for lunch I stopped at the corner newsstand and bought a copy of the Boston Evening American.

While I was eating my lunch I turned the paper to the Classified Pages and looked over the Rooms for Rent columns.

There were three places advertised that appealed to me, so I checked those with a pencil right away.

That evening I went over to the first place. It was just one block from the car. When I rang the bell the nicest little lady answered the door and I went in. She told me that there had already been four others ahead of me who had seen her ad in the Boston Evening American.

But we seemed to get along so well together and I liked her so much and enthused so much over the room that she said I could have it. It is really just what I have been looking for, and I am sure you would approve, mother dear, if you could see it.

The little lady, her husband and little daughter live there together. The room I have is their extra room. It's on the outside and is large and light and airy. And they're the nicest people. I'm sure I'm going to like the place ever so much.

Mrs. Brown, that's the lady's name, tells me that she never has any trouble at all renting a room. Whenever her roomer has to leave, she just puts another ad in the Boston Evening American and it's rented in no time.

I wish I'd looked in the Boston Evening American before, then I wouldn't have had to live in that little stuffy room for the last two months. You know, mother, I'm becoming a regular Classified Ad fan. There are so many little things that I really need and want advertised in the Boston Evening American's Classified columns every day.

I must close now and do some sewing for tomorrow.

Lots of love from LOUISE.

ADVERTISER TO REWARD THOSE WHO KNOW N.E.

$500 in Prizes to Be Awarded to Persons Giving Right Titles to Pictures

How many readers of the Boston Evening American KNOW New England?

In other words, do you know the names of the villages, towns and cities included in this wonderful section of the United States? Or do you only THINK you know?

If you are familiar with the names of towns and cities of the six States which comprise New England, you stand a good chance to win one of the prizes in the Boston Advertiser's new $500 contest which started in today.

The full list of prizes follows:

First prize	$250.00
Second prize	100.00
Third prize	50.00
Fourth prize	25.00
Fifth prize	15.00
Sixth prize	10.00
Ten prizes of	5.00

Beginning today and continuing for 28 days the Daily and Sunday Advertiser will print one drawing each day pictorially illustrating the name of a village, town or city in New England. Contestants are to carefully study the pictures and then decide what places in New England they represent.

Each picture is clear and if you are a good thinker and KNOW New England you probably will not find it difficult to figureout the name of the place illustrated. All answers are to be sent in at the end of the contest, on ONE sheet of paper with a 100-word letter on the subject, "This Summer in New England."

That wonderful first prize of $250 will be paid to the person who sends in the largest number of correct answers and the best letter upon the subject already mentioned. The other prizes will go to the other contestants sending in the next best.

The contest is open to any person, anywhere, with the exception of Hearst publications employes and their families, and no fee is necessary to enter. It is not even necessary for contestants to purchase copies of the Daily and Sunday Advertiser.

All that anyone must do to qualify for a prize is to submit a complete set of answers and the 100-word letter previously referred to.

No favoritism of any kind is to be shown in the awarding of prizes, as the management of the Advertiser is not interested, in any way, in who the winners will be. It will pay the money to SOMEBODY and has no idea of whose names are to grace the list of prize winners. For further details see tomorrow's Daily Advertiser.

MONEY CLUE TO SHEPHERD WITNESS

White Said to Be in Pittsburgh, Where Friends Sent $117 by Telegraph

Chicago, June 1 (A.P.).—Reports that Robert White, missing witness in the murder trial of William D. Shepherd, might be in Pittsburgh, interested officials here as the third week of jury selection opened.

With four jurymen chosen and indications that the skirmishing of the last two weeks was over, both prosecution and defence said it was probable the full quota would be obtained before the end of the week.

Dispatches from Pittsburgh said that a search was in progress there for White, following word from Chicago that friends of the missing witness had telegraphed $117 to him last Friday.

Pittsburgh detectives have been on guard at the telegraph office since that time, waiting for the money to be claimed.

Marines Got More Credit Than They Deserved, Declares Gen. Bullard---How Yankees Were Rushed Into Battle at Chateau Thierry

THE truth about the Marines—how they were overrated because of the rule against mentioning organizations by name, is told by Gen. Bullard in today's installment of his memories. How the Yankees were rushed up to the defense of Paris and their part in the battle of Chateau Thierry also is told.

AS THESE are personal memoirs of Experiences, the pronoun "I" can never be out of sight. I am not offering these memories as absolute fact, but as my impression and belief at the time. —R. L. BULLARD.

CHAPTER XXI

CANTIGNY and the Boche drive to the Marne (Chateau Thierry salient) had been practically simultaneous. Very soon, perhaps a week after, the rumor reached me that the 1st Division was to be relieved in its sector before Montdidier by the 2d (American) Division and we were to be sent to the Marne to face the Germans there. I was glad. It was the place of danger and so the place of honor. We felt very proud. But while plans, as we afterward learned, had actually been thus formed, the energy of the Boche prevented them from ever being executed.

He had suddenly became so active, so threatening in the battle of the Chateau Thierry salient that the 2d Division on its way to relieve us had to be deflected to Chateau Thierry for immediate help to the French there. In their following fight at Belleau Woods this division did wonderful work in helping to stop the Boche in his push toward Paris.

In the 2d Division, constituting about one-third of it, was a brigade of Marines. To prevent valuable information from reaching the enemy our censorship regulations prohibited press reports from mentioning organizations.

So say "Marines" did not violate this regulation. It mentioned no organization. So the press reports of the 2d Division's fight shouted "Marines!" until the word resounded over the whole earth and made the inhabitants thereon, except a few Americans in the army in France believe that there was nothing in the 2d Division and, indeed, nothing in front of the Germans but Marines.

The American war correspondents were certainly prompted for the Marines. While their reports were resounding at the highest and American censors were screaming the Marines as the saviors of Paris and the war, General Pershing came on a visit to us.

Pershing Puts Stop to Marines Stories

"General," I said to him at dinner, "I see that the 2d Marines (emphasizing the 2d as though that division was all marines) have won the war at Belleau Woods."

"Yes," he answered dryly, "and I stopped it yesterday as I passed there."

But had he? He stopped only what was yet to come, not what had already gone forth. That he could not stop, and it was, I say, enough to convince all good enthusiastic Americans that at Belleau Woods there was nothing but marines and of course I left to imagine their valor and credit for the thought of Peter Dunne's "Alone in Cuba."

The commander of my command in consequence of the deflection of the 2d Division was but a temporary delay. A little war worn, war exhausted French division soon came in its place. Its [illegible] made [illegible] trying to [illegible] Its [illegible] Never was [illegible] sacrifice [illegible]

By [illegible] of the [illegible] orders [illegible] between Paris and the Marne. There salient. After [illegible] fourth [illegible] salient was [illegible] Paris more threatened [illegible] ever. The [illegible] and [illegible] Belleau Wood [illegible] and Chateau Thierry [illegible] exist the lower [illegible] Marne [illegible] across the Marne [illegible] General McCain [illegible] ment of the 2d American [illegible] had immortalized themselves [illegible] venting this [illegible] the nose of Chateau Thierry [illegible] part of the [illegible] the south bank of the Marne.

And now the 1st Division was to be [illegible] and [illegible] Soissons [illegible] and [illegible] Paris. [illegible] and seemed [illegible] other [illegible] two and [illegible] two [illegible] shall have [illegible] and known as "Bullard's Corps." Things were growing in the A. E. F.

Now, in the early half of June the enemy seemed determined to break out of his salient [illegible] to Paris. All [illegible] American forces [illegible] being hurried into the [illegible] between Paris and Chateau Thierry. It was a time and [illegible] hurry, uncertainty, almost [illegible] soon. Commands were [illegible] coming, everywhere.

I was to have the 4th American Corps, to consist of [illegible] 2d divisions and others [illegible] region. In the kaleidoscope [illegible] of orders and plans [illegible] never [illegible] divisions [illegible] Soissons were [illegible] to meet the Germans [illegible] the bank of the Marne, threatening [illegible] weak 6th French Army between [illegible] Paris.

Mrs. Grover, Jr., 21 years old and a graduate of the Lynn schools, is black haired, has sparkling brown eyes, and is a typical bobbed-haired college miss.

THE CAT CAME BACK

By Foxy Grandpa

"GOOD afternoon," said Bobby politely, taking off his hat and looking over the hand of the lady at whose house we were to take tea.

Bobby only waited until Bunny and I had spoken to our hostess and then he asked:

"Is Becky around, Miss Arnold?"

Miss Arnold looked sad for a moment and then she said quietly:

"Bobby, I am sorry to say that Becky isn't. I had to send her away, because she was killing all of the birds in my garden. I knew that she couldn't help it, because that is a cat's nature, but you know I love birds and am making a study of them. So although it made me feel very badly to part with my beautiful cat, whom I had brought up since she was a fluffy little kitten, I simply had to find another home for her."

"Oh," sighed Bobby. "Becky was such a nice cat."

Bunny shook his head in approval, because Becky had never tried to annoy him, and he said that she was one of the few cats for whom he could have any friendly feeling whatever.

"Where did you send her?" I asked.

"To some friends of mine who live about twelve miles from here," replied Miss Arnold. "They have other cats and so if the birds are bothered there it won't be entirely Becky's fault. She will have a very good home, I am sure," added Miss Arnold with a sigh. "But I do miss seeing her curled up there in front of the fire."

The maid brought in the tea and we gathered around Miss Arnold for a cosy visit. She even had a plate of radishes there for Bunny.

We talked and laughed and were having such a good time that I didn't notice that it was growing dark outside. Then I looked at my wrist-watch and said:

"Oh, Miss Arnold, I'm afraid we're keeping you. We have made a long visit. We must be going now." And I arose to get my hat.

"I've enjoyed your visit so much," smiled our nice friend, "and you've quite cheered me up. I've been very lonely since Becky went away three days ago."

We walked out into the hall and were standing there in front of the door, saying good-bye and telling our hostess what a pleasant time we had had and she was asking us to come soon again, when there was a scratching at the door.

"What's that?" I asked.

"If Becky were still here I would think it was she," answered Miss Arnold, walking toward the door.

Then I was certain I heard "meows" and the looks which Bunny and Bobby gave me indicated that they had thought the same thing.

Miss Arnold opened the door and stood back. And what do you think happened? Right into the hallway and right up to Miss Arnold walked the most bedraggled-looking cat I have ever seen!

"Becky!" gasped Miss Arnold. And she leaned down and picked up Becky, held her close and stroked her, while Becky gave forth a pitiful whimpering combination of a cry and a purr.

"Becky!" we all echoed.

"Well!" said Miss Arnold. "Do you realize that this poor pussy cat has traveled twelve miles in three days to get home?"

"Extraordinary!" I said. "What are you going to do about her now?" I laughed.

"She'll never be sent away again," said Miss Arnold, stroking the tired pussy affectionately.

"I don't blame Becky for wanting to get back to that nice mistress and good home," said Bunny as we went down the front steps. "They were the most delicious radishes I ever tasted."

Resinol cleared away pimples in a week

Lexington, Mass., March 5:—"I had been suffering from shaving pimples on my neck for years and, I believe, had tried everything under the sun for them without avail. One day on a friend's advice, I purchased some of your Resinol Ointment and was astonished at the quick results. After a week's constant use the pimples disappeared completely, leaving the skin clear and fresh. I had thought my case was hopeless, so you can readily see I was overjoyed at this cure. You can be sure that henceforth you have one more loyal booster for your product." (Signed) Fred J. Fox, 8 Bloomfield St.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

AMERICA is the most progressive nation in the world and it's about time we started putting new photographs on our currency.

PEOPLE are tired of looking at George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Benjamin Franklin. We should put pep into our money with pictures of Peggy Joyce, "Ma" Ferguson or Imogene Wilson.

NO matter who makes the money, the women get it sooner or later.

THIS might stop the dames from taking a man's dough. Peggy Joyce wouldn't want five hundred thousand dollars if they had Imogene Wilson's photograph on them.

NO woman would want to spend another girl's picture.

THIS idea would help us to save. If a lady's picture was on a ten dollar bill, a man would think a long time before he'd break it.

HE might need change, but he'd still be a gentleman.

OF course a plan like this would cause a lot of jealousy. No wife would want her husband to have another woman's photograph in his pocket.

INSTEAD of denominations, the currency would go by pictures. A man would go into a bank and say: "Give me twenty Peggy Joyces for this Ma Ferguson."

AND the teller might say: "I'm sorry, I haven't got them, but I can give you ten Imogene Wilsons."

THIS would start a lot of fighting among the women. They'd all want their pictures on hundred dollar bills.

THE U. S. mint would have a hard time getting photographs for bucks.

A DAME who wasn't well known would have to be satisfied with getting her picture on quarters.

NICKELS and dimes would be reserved for photographs of women that nobody ever heard of.

FIVE hundred and thousand dollar greenbacks would be held for local celebrities such as women who stabbed their sweethearts or shot their husbands.

NEW JERSEY and Long Island could use a lot of these bills, but Hollywood would get most of them.

FLORENZ ZIEGFELD has glorified the American girl, and now it's up to Andrew Mellon to beautify the American dollar.

Odd—What?

A small piece of inconsistency that's rather droll to see

FOR SUMMER HOME

By Hannah Wing

A Recognized Authority on All Matters Pertaining to Household Management.

THERE are a number of things needed in the household during the Summer that ones forgets about until the time to use comes upon one unawares. As a gentle reminder we suggest the following:

Oil paper—needed for wrapping picnic sandwiches, for covering food in the ice box to keep smells from spreading and particularly for wrapping fish. Buying oiled or the heavy parafined paper in rolls is by way of being a real economy as well as a convenience.

Speaking of fish, if there's a sportsman in the family you will be sure to need and enjoy one of the new and really good fish scalers which remove the scales in a hurry by simply rubbing the device over the fish.

Then there are the new and lovely weatherproof—which means sun, sand and waterproof—oilcloths and figured oilcloths which make delightful pillow, table and chair coverings for the porch and need not be brought in to protect them from the weather. If the porch needs refurnishing be sure to investigate these.

While you are in the housefurnishing shop you may be interested in looking at a new porch and garden broom. These are fairly heavy but well balanced so that they sway easily and the bristles are long and tough so that the unevenness of the garden walks will not so soon wear them out.

With strawberries and pineapples becoming plentiful don't overlook the purchase of that simple little tweezer-like device which removes the hulls of strawberries in the twinkling of an eye without damage to the fruit or stains to the fingers. Equally useful are the pineapple shears, which remove the objectionable eyes of the pineapple with almost surgical ease.

There are more kinds of holders than those made for lifting hot pans. A truly useful one holds asparagus upright when put in fresh water to freshen or when put in to boil so that the tips are only steamed. Another holder puts the two-minute egg in and takes it out

HOUR after hour, day in and day out, that dull, unceasing throb? Tortured with sharp, stabbing twinges—so lame, weak, all tired-out, you just can't enjoy a moment's comfort?

Too often this condition is due to the kidneys not properly eliminating the body poisons. Blood and nerves are upset and many distressing aches and ills result. Your back aches; is lame and stiff. You have headaches, dizziness and distressing kidney irregularities.

Don't let kidney trouble get a firm hold. If your kidneys are inactive, help them with a tested diuretic. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's act on the kidneys only. They are used and recommended the world over. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say Boston Folks:

A. T. HOWARD, 74 Falcon St., says: "I had attacks from my kidneys, which I think was caused from a strain. The first symptom was a hurting in my back and later sharp stitches took me across my back every time I stooped. When I straightened up the pains became more intense. There was also a lameness just over my kidneys. Doan's Pills cured me entirely."

MRS. T. FLOAT, 124 Eustis St., Roxbury, says: "I felt all out of sorts when my kidneys got out of order. The least work tired me out and made by back weak and lame. There was a tired feeling across my back and never rested well. When I stooped over, sharp pains became more intense. I also had dizzy spells and headaches. I decided to try Doan's Pills and only needed one box to be cured of the attack."

FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

A number of people, quite a number of people, are finding fault with me. They complain that my writings on business conditions are too optimistic. Most of them are sufficiently kind to suggest that, of course, I must know better and that I am striving to throw dust in the public's eyes.

Well, I plead guilty to having been taking an optimistic view of basic business conditions, monetary conditions and security market conditions. I plead guilty also to having devoted more space to calling the roll or forecasting developments than to harping on the difficulties or developments. I recently used some such expression as that it probably would prove more profitable to pay more heed to the business doughnut than to the hole in it.

Not only am I not paid to write, but no newspaper owner or editor has ever even asked me to write lies. I write what I believe to be true, earn a living by conscientiously writing the truth as I see it, and evidently I have no temptation at this stage of my life to prostitute my pen for financial profit. It is intimidating to think that it is necessary to say such things, but it is necessary to say, and to say in the plainest terms, that I never wrote a line that I do not believe to be true.

My judgment, like every other human being's judgment, can at times be wrong, dead wrong. But such judgments as I express are at least sincere even though they evidently very often strike readers as cheerfully unsound.

* * *

Certainly business conditions and business prospects have favorable features. I have never known the time when they didn't. Have you? Perhaps I could name as many of them as the most fellow. For example:

The coal industry is in a shocking state, with many mines under unreasonable mismanagement during the last many years.

Not one, have one railroads earned the "fair return" specified in the transportation act of 1920, nor are they at all likely to do so this year. The consequence is that railroad building has not kept pace with our natural growth, and for this we doubtless will one day pay a severe penalty.

The administration of our national affairs has been unsupervisedly loose and extravagant; many of our State administrations have been no better; large number of municipalities are also misgoverned. Consequently, the several burdens levied upon householders, business men, industrial enterprises, railroad companies, etc., have been and still are heartbreakingly heavy, to the enormous moment to business and our national well-being.

The important textile industry has been flat on its back for a long period, due in part to the cutting down of clothing worn by our women folk and to their preference for silk stockings years for silk, semi-silk and artificial silk apparel.

The shoe industry has been far from prosperous and is not yet in a position to do any boasting.

Neither the United States nor foreign demand for automobiles seems to keep our productive capacity fully employed for many months on end, with the result that the so-called "independent" steel companies have not been waxing rich.

There has been and still is widespread complaint that the margin of profit in many lines of business is unpleasantly narrow.

Several millions of families are distressed with the amount of rent they are compelled to pay, and admittedly high rents are the building industry are out of line with wages in most other industries.

The vastly important oil industry has been passing through an overproduction for a long time and many oil securities have consequently suffered.

The copper industry has been the opposite of prosperous for an equally long period.

The tourism has fallen out of sugar prices.

Of late, speculation in various public utility and other stocks has obviously become wild.

And our minds are on adding to this mournful list.

* * *

But the full picture has another side, a bright side. And, for one, believe that there is never warrant for preparing for prosperity than for preparing for depression.

* * *

Of course, those who tell me that my reading of the outlook is as wrong as wrong could be may be 100 per cent right. Time will tell. Tomorrow, 1925 is a business

COTTON MILLS AGREE ON MORE CURTAILMENT

Curtailment of production to extent of at least 20% for 60 days to be put before August 15 agreed upon by Southern mill officials attending house of delegates meeting of 85,000 looms, according to David Clark of Charlotte, N. C., who has been taken to secure agreement for curtailment by mills operating about 600,000 spindles. Agreement for cooperative curtailment is not expected to conflict with rulings of Federal Trade Commission.

STOCK SALES TO DATE SET UP A NEW RECORD

Total stock sales to date this year approximate 175,000,000 shares, large as of any like period in history of New York Stock Exchange. Total sales last month exceeded 36,000,000 shares and were largest of any May on record, previous figure having been established in May, 1901, during so-called Northern Pacific panic. Bond sales in first five months of 1925 were in excess of $1,600,000,000, but nearly $55,000,000 below total for first five months of 1929.

LIVERMORE IS UNLIKELY TO QUIT MARKET

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

On reading the New York dispatch that Jesse Livermore, former Boston market operator, is said to be about to make market speculation with a fortune of $20,000,000 and confine himself to the grain market in Chicago, arouses us to ask: Is he about to have made another $10,000,000 in this year's rise and fall of wheat, local friends of Mr. Livermore availed our own every day or two to announcing that Mr. Livermore had virtually quit the stock market for the grain pit. It seems like a pretty big order to say he will not return.

When the bull market comes to a conclusion, which is inevitable, seeing that all bull markets have an end and that what goes up must come down, the writer looks to see Mr. Livermore among those who will make a big profit in the decline and he will not be accompanied to a lesser band while placing his sell orders nearly in advance of the drop.

Franklin T. Miller, receiver of the Boston & Worcester St. Ry. Co., intends to operate the Boston-Worcester Elevated in the bus business. Judge Wait of the Supreme Court has authorized receiver Miller to operate buses through the following cities and towns: Boston, Newton, Waltham, Marlboro, Worcester, Auburn, Brookline, Bradford, Hamilton, Hudson, Hudson, Natick, Northboro, Shrewsbury, Southboro, Sudbury, Watertown, Wayland, Westboro and Weston.

I am told Atchison is the railroad stock now most largely held by New England investors. One good State Street brokerage house calls it "the world's best railroad stock." President Storey of Atchison denies reports of negotiations for acquisition of Chicago Great Western, saying Atchison is not entering into negotiations with Great Western for acquisition of its properties. He says business conditions are good. The best statistical bureaus agree in that year, a large number of municipalities are also misgoverned. Consequently, the several burdens levied upon householders, business men, industrial enterprises, railroad companies, etc., have been and still are heartbreakingly heavy, to the enormous moment to business and our national well-being.

The writer learns from Traffic Manager John D. Battle of the National Coal Association that in the four and a half years since 1920 the railroads of the United States have saved over $250,000,000 in the reduced cost of coal prices.

"Rails being the largest customer of the other, it is the mutual duty of both to work together to the end that good, otherwise prosperity can be the lot of neither," says Mr. Battle.

Stating that over-productive capacity ordinarily exists in every line of industry, Mr. Battle calls attention to the fact that in the enormous industry the surplus mines and capacity came into being when coal was at its peak in the excess of the war, and the public now profits thereby in cheap coal at the mines. Mr. Battle urged a careful study of the freight rate situation to the end mine whether a reduction in coal rates would move a larger volume of business and in the end be more profitable to both carriers and bituminous coal operators.

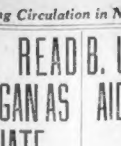
DILLON, READ TAKE LOGAN AS ASSOCIATE

Dillon, Read & Co. confirm the report that Colonel James A. Logan, Jr., has become associated with the firm in an executive capacity. Colonel Logan will be a partner in the firm, and will participate in a new commercial business which is to be established with the firm. His duties will be largely with the firm's foreign connections. He will continue his connection with Equitable Trust Co. of New York.

Colonel Logan was a private in Battery A, Pennsylvania Volunteers in mission, and after service in the Spanish war was commissioned a captain in the United States army in 1911. He was a colonel in the World War. He was chosen because of his familiarity with military questions abroad as chief of the American military mission with the French army from September, 1914, to June, 1917.



Col. J. A. Logan

DOES BIG TASKS ABROAD.

When it became evident that the United States would enter the war Colonel Logan was assigned to prepare for the arrival of General Pershing in France and was named as assistant chief of staff with general headquarters of the American expeditionary forces. He managed to obtain the formation of the sizable organization created to handle the American troops who were to follow General Pershing abroad.

In 1919 Col. Logan became principal assistant in Europe to Herbert Hoover in his work as director-general of relief, under the supreme economic council. This involved the transportation and distribution of 5,000,000 tons of food, temporary American control of central and southern European railroads, initiation of commercial and governmental exchange of food and raw materials between newly established states, the control of some 10,000 miles of telephone and telegraph lines, the reestablishment of shipping on the Danube, Elbe and Vistula, and the direction of international coal distribution.

WORKS ON PROBLEMS.

This task over, Col. Logan gave his attention to financial and political problems existing between the countries of Europe and affecting their relations with the United States. He was the unofficial liaison on the reparations commission in association with Roland W. Boyden up to August, 1923, when he took charge of the United States official advisers to the powers' council of Ireland, Czecho-Slovakia, Austria and the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croates and Slovenes. During this period Col. Logan made exhaustive studies of the political and political financial relations of practically all the countries of central Europe.

Probably the outstanding achievement of his last 10 years' efforts in behalf of the American government was his work as unofficial observer in the Dawes plan negotiations, and the aid that he was able to extend, through his vast store of knowledge of European conditions, to the American representatives, Charles G. Dawes and Owen D. Young.

COPPER SITUATION BETTER, SAY PRODUCERS

Although copper prices show no chance for the better, the trade consider the situation as improved. Producers say consumption is as large as it has been at any time this year with exports at a high level. Lead prices have been advanced sharply and some traders think copper prices will do likewise.

It Is Not All Fun—

Making a Few Hundred Millions for Yourself, Then Managing the National Pocketbook

The latest picture of Mr. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury. In spite of his great nervous energy, his face looks tired. WELL IT MAY.

At St. Augustine, before he was inaugurated, President Harding, then just elected, said to this writer: "I am going to appoint the second richest man in the world Secretary of the Treasury in my Cabinet. What do you think the people will say about that?"

The answer, from one who didn't know the "second richest man in the world," was:

"The people will be glad for a change to have somebody managing their money who has proved that he knows how to make money, and how to MANAGE IT FOR HIMSELF."

This picture shows the "second richest man in the world" whom President Harding chose for Secretary of the Treasury, and who continues in office, luckily for the people and for sound reputable men, under President Coolidge.

This is the latest photograph of Secretary Mellon taken at his desk in Washington. You will notice that it isn't all fun building up a fortune of several hundred millions for yourself and then taking charge, at the comic salary we pay Cabinet officers, of the nation's pocketbook.

Secretary Mellon, as his face shows, is a typical American, with tremendous nervous power, a well developed back head that keeps driving the front brain to the limit of capacity.

He can do enough thinking, planning and EXECUTING in one day to tire out half a dozen less able minds. There is as much difference between different brains and the values of different brains as there is between the values of different kinds of metal. The pig iron that you can buy for a few dollars would cost millions manufactured into watch springs.

However, you needn't envy Secretary Mellon the hundreds of millions that he has accumulated for himself in the game of life. All he gets from them is a place to sleep, a ride in an automobile and a careful diet that the ordinary man would reject as wholly inadequate. He gets also a certain sense of POWER AND SUCCESS, and probably that is what he has worked for.

Just at present this man of extraordinary ability is working for the people of the United States. He manages their national pocketbook, the gigantic revenue that runs into thousands of millions a year. He manages the payment of government's cost, the paying of the national debt, and the important task of reducing taxes from a hysterical war basis to a SOUND PEACE BASIS, that will give business and prosperity a chance to thrive.

This is an interesting face, and important to the people of this country.

One good idea from that brain, stimulating business, may mean EMPLOYMENT FOR TEN MILLION MEN.

Dreams

It is over a century and a half since journalism was treated as a fourth governing power, with the aristocracy, the church, and the people as the other three. Perhaps today we might say that the governing powers are the people, finance, and the press.

With so great power the press beckons to those who have powerful convictions and literary powers. What weapon would a Voltaire use if he were alive? He wrote pamphlets incessantly and letters:

. . . . as the wind
Blow where it listed, laying all things prone,
Now to o'erthrow a fool, and now to shake a throne.

Perhaps Voltaire was the greatest journalist who has lived. Swift is high up. Will the vast power of the press summon new Voltaires and Swifts to the rostrum from which their messages can be flashed to the furthermost corners of the earth?

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By Helen Rowland

THERE is nothing like learning to drive a car to fill you with philosophy, patience and an understanding of your husband.

* * *

If a husband and wife still love each other after he has taught her how to drive the family car it is a sign that they were mated in heaven.

* * *

Most matrimonial mix-ups, jams and wrecks are due to careless inattention in watching for the signals.

Helen Rowland

If a woman would only study the little "signals" of her husband's MOODS she could foresee his left-hand turns, his "stops" and his anxiety to park, and shut off her gas or apply the brakes to her temper in time to avoid a smash-up.

* * *

But a man will ride right over his wife's pet prejudices and aversions, break through the windshield of her vanity and leave her stalled somewhere indefinitely without even suspecting that he is guilty of an offense.

* * *

And a woman will dent the fender of her husband's pride, take a wheel off his independence or sideswipe the running board of his amour propre—and never realize that she is crumpling his style!

* * *

The favorite attitude of lots of husbands and wives is to look wheels in a cross-current effort to PASS each other—and then sit and ARGUE about who started the trouble and who is to blame. Most couples go to their graves without reaching a decision!

* * *

Domestic wrangles, like sand storms on the desert, may leave the matrimonial machine intact, but they are apt to take off all the color, paint and romance.

* * *

And a woman's tears, like rainstorms, may wash things clean for a time, but they nearly always start a man skidding.

* * *

Lots of marriages, like lots of motor trips, end in court, these days. But COURTING is what a woman is after.

* * *

And courting might last from the altar to the end of the trip if a husband and wife would only watch for each other's signals and show each other the common "Courtesy of the Road!"

* * *

Motor-Sense is the Sixth Sense! But, alas! thousands of people hold a driver's license and a marriage license, who haven't a grain of it!

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

IF you by some strange chance would see this message here, today, and turning back with memory down time's dark path would stray, remember this: a sun-bright shore, blue waves and shining sand, and sea-songs that the swift wind bore across the listening land. Remember sea-gulls flying there above the wind-tossed foam when distant sails were shining fair as happy ships turned home. Remember, too, the vows we made, the deathless love we swore; ah, since that day our steps have strayed so far from that bright shore, so far away from love and youth, from wind and singing sea, I doubt if our two selves, in truth, are those they used to be! And yet, since naught of beauty dies or wholly fades away, my heart still holds that Paradise of sun-bright sands and spray!

WHAT IS IT FOR ONE TO BE HUMAN?

By DR. FRANK CRANE

WE often say we like such and such a man because "he is so human."

Such a woman attracts us because she is "human."

What we mean by this remark is that they are subject to the human frailties.

An old Boston preacher once called on me, and as he lit his cigar and drank some cognac brandy in his coffee after dinner, he said, "I am glad to see a man who has a few redeeming vices."

Most of us regard vices as evidences of brotherhood. They show that a man is down on our plane and is not removed from us.

We should remember, however, that while it is human to err, as Pope said, it is also human to be conscious of error, to reject it and struggle against it.

The human thing is to have a temptation, to be subject to it. That is one part of our humanity.

Another element of our humanity, however, is to struggle against evil.

We go for comfort and help to the men who have overcome weakness, not to the men who have yielded.

It gives us a fellow feeling for a man to know that he is subject to the same temptations as ourselves. But his advice and example do us no good unless he has successfully combatted with these temptations and overcome them.

It is said of the Master that He was tempted in all points like as we, yet was without sin. It is this very fact of His being without sin, of His having had the temptations and of having overcome them that renders Him a source of strength to humanity.

On the one hand we do not get any benefit from one who has never felt the urge that we have felt, the propensity to evil; on the other hand we do not get any help if he has yielded to it.

The fact that another man has felt the same temptations that we have makes him an inheritor of our common lot, gives us for him a fellow feeling; but we must remember that he is of no assistance to us unless he has successfully combatted these temptations.

There are many examples of those who have gone wrong, who have yielded to the same attacks that are made upon us, but there are a few examples of those who have successfully resisted them.

We all know how to yield. We all do not know how to resist. And the power to resist is what we most desire

THE STRANGE RISE OF "EL NINO"

By Garrett P. Serviss

TO an extent that only those who have specially studied the subject comprehend, the great features of climate affecting human welfare are dependent upon the direction and character of ocean currents, and recently there has occurred a remarkable change in one of the smaller of these currents, which, if continued, would transform the climate of the west coast of South America from its age-long condition of aridity to one of tropical fertility.

This astonishing, though apparently but temporary change, has been wrought through the agency of a somewhat mysterious current which only occasionally puts forth its full power on the South American coast, and which is personified by the Spanish name, "El Nino" (the child).

For the greater part of the time the powerful Humboldt current, sweeping upward along the coast from the direction of the Antarctic, prevails, and not only the ocean life along the shore is adapted to the cool waters of this current, but the climatic conditions of the adjoining land are similarly governed.

Usually between December and April "El Nino" awakes and, flowing southward from the equatorial region, it comes into opposition to the Humboldt current, which it partially arrests, or diverts, while altering the temperature of the sea along the coast through the intermixture of its warmer waters.

Very rarely, however, does El Nino become strong enough to take possession of the field and control the climate on the Peruvian coast. When that happens a meteorological revolution is the result.

Now according to Dr. Robert C. Murphy, assistant director of the American Museum of Natural History, who happened to be engaged in oceanic studies on the Peruvian coast last Winter, El Nino has this year outdone itself to an astonishing degree.

"The advance of El Nino during the past Winter," says Dr. Murphy, "has exceeded in power and extent anything ever known before. Since the middle of January northerly winds have prevailed along most of the western coast of South America, while the surface waters have been flowing southward instead of northward. Practically all steamers from Peruvian and Chilean ports were delayed in reaching Panama.

"A great reversal of generally stable oceanic conditions had been effected, and equally remarkable was the replacement of the reliable southerly winds, upon which navigators have banked for ages, by fitful and yet recurrent rain-bearing winds from the direction of the equator.

"All this, accompanied by the migration of vast schools of hammerhead sharks, giant rays and flying fish, produced a dramatic effect difficult to express in words."

The change lasted until the middle of April. The climatic consequences are more disastrous.

Great floods spread destruction and dismay where before rains had been almost unknown, and yet the immediate carpeting of vast stretches of arid plains with green vegetation, on which half-starved animals feasted as they had never done in their lives, showed what the ultimate effect would be if El Nino instead of the Humboldt current should remain permanently in control.

Contrary to the widespread popular belief that the sudden rise of El Nino was due to changes produced by volcanic upheaval in the floor of the Pacific Ocean, Dr. Murphy affirms that it is safe to assume that the cause was not seismic, but meteorological, i. e., not changes in the crust of the earth, but changes in the state of the atmosphere.

But meteorological causes for such variations of condition as this are difficult to define in a form which laymen can readily accept. There is a sharpness and definiteness in the local effects which seem inconsistent with the broad general causes assigned for them.

Once in a while on the Atlantic coast the mysteriously working "powers of the air" interfere to favor either the Gulf Stream or the Greenland current, which are opposed to one another somewhat like El Nino and the Humboldt current, and if the consequent change of climatic conditions should ever attain a great intensity and continue for a long time, or permanently, the effect upon the history of the western and eastern United States might be immense.

ONCE-OVERS

WHY SHOULD YOU LET OTHER FELLOWS LEAD YOU INTO TROUBLE?

Because you are a good fellow do you follow the crowd's lead even though you may realize that you are not doing right?

Perhaps you can think of some shady things in which you took part, not because you wanted to, but because you lacked the stamina to take a definite stand against the majority in your crowd.

Perhaps you and others were caught, and it all might have been avoided if you had used some moral grit.

You may figure that when something within you tells you that you should do a certain thing there are others in the party who are having the same prompting, but like yourself they fear to lose their popularity.

Don't be a blind follower of any set of men or of any individual.

A few hours or a few moments even might spoil a whole lifetime of clean living.

Can you afford to take such a chance?

When you are tempted, use your brains.
